Doan's Solid
The newly appointed master at a school had learned all about "cribbing" and such little dodges as schoolboys practise, and had not forgotten them.
One day during a lesson in history he observed one of his pupils take out his watch every minute or two. He grew suspicious, thinking that the pupil was consulting notes on the lesson. Finally he strode slowly by between the desks and stopped in front of the boy. "Let me see your watch," he commanded.
"Yes, sir," was the meek reply.
The master opened the front of the case. He looked somewhat sheepish when he read the single word "Sold!"
But he was a shrewd man. He was not to be thrown off the scent so easily. He opened the back of the case. Then he was satisfied, for he read: "Sold again!"

Caustic
There is a certain party who is very volatile. Long after a dialogue in which he is concerned has reached its logical finish he persists in dragging it forward, in stringing out his sentences to the utmost notch. A friend who was patiently waiting the other day for the verbose one to wind up one of his harangues testily summed up his method. It was this: "There's Bill again at his favorite game of turning periods into commas!"

She Tooked it Off
A little girl, aged three, had been left in the nursery by herself, and her brother arrived to find the door closed. The following conversation took place:
"I want to tun in, Cissie."
"But I wantn't tun in, Tom."
"But I wantn't tun in, Tom."
"Well, I've in my nightie gown, ar' nurse says little boys mustn't see little girls in their nightie gowns." After an astonished and reflective silence on Tom's side of the door, the miniature Eve announced triumphantly: "You tun tun in now, Tom; I tooked it off!"

A Dean's Opinion
Dean Inge, of St. Paul's cathedral, London, thinks socialism would be an omnipotent bureaucracy needing for its control men like Napoleon or Pierpont Morgan. This would mean that socialism is inconsistent with human liberty and has no aim save to run the entire business of a country by a sort of governmental despotism. Where the Dean of St. Paul's makes the mistake is in assuming that any autocrat or captain of industry would have anything to do with socialism—and indeed the tyranny of any one man would be mild compared with the tyranny of socialism.—Rochester "Post Express."
