THE DENTAL INSPECTION

AS PROPOSED TO INAUGURATE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

This and Problem of Better Housing Subjects of Address by Robert Meek at Y.M.C.A. on Monday Evening

At the Y.M.C.A. Monday evening, Robert Meek spoke to the young men's class upon subjects of a local and secular character. Two of these were of special interest—the dental inspection, which it is proposed to inaugurate in the public schools, and better housing. Both will very largely affect, and favorably, the working classes.

First, with regard to the care of teeth. He said that the regulations of the education department were antiquated. They required visiting and at the earliest opportunity. They do not seem to be adaptable to the size of Kingston. They provide for a dental clinic, for the appointment of an inspector, and for the presentation of a petition from a certain percentage of the people, following, presumably, an agitation or educational campaign. The meaning of this regulation was that the people understood the need of dental inspection, that they were seized with all the facts, and that when they presented their petition to the trustees they were ready for action, with machinery for service of the most effective kind.

Now Kingston had a plan of its own, and a better plan. The dental inspection was to be inaugurated after the plan of the medical inspection, and after the people had been informed fully of the procedure. The dentists had been good enough to arrange for an inspection of the schools, free of cost, and they proposed to supply data upon which the medical nurse could refer to the homes cases requiring the special attention of the parents. These parents were required, then, to have their own dentists care for the teeth of the children, and six months later there would be a report through the dental association of the success of the inspection, and of the work of the dentists, through the parents, in the meantime.

Mr. Meek quoted from Oral Health reports of a kind that warranted the immediate introduction of the dental inspection in Kingston. He pointed out that the average boy of ten, according to Oral Health, had in his mouth a source of infection and poison which contaminated the whole body, that decay in place of digestion in the alimentary tract set in, and that something was bound to happen. These were usually the results: Eystrenia, anaemia, malaise, constipation, fevers, and other ailments. "Such a mouth," said Dr. Fones, "is the breeding ground of germ life." "Such a mouth," said the same doctor, "is more susceptible to infectious disease than a child with sound teeth and with teeth free from food debris." He added that about 85 per cent. of the decay in children's teeth could be prevented by treatment, and it was believed that the plan suggested in Kingston, and to be inaugurated there, would be most effective, and with regard to what it was sure

Reference was made to the appeal to the Ontario government some years ago in the interests of this problem, and a problem which was facing every municipality in the province. A bill was framed by the provincial secretary and unanimously passed by the legislature, which provided a way for the housing of the people most satisfactorily. The act provided for government aid when private enterprise failed; it encouraged the voluntary principle of meeting the contingency; it provided for the administration of the funds raised by municipal securities, by bodies specially appointed for the purpose. In this housing problem the co-operators were the city on one hand and the occupants of the houses on the other. A plan in Toronto to the council guaranteed bonds to the extent of $850,000, while the housing company raised $150,000. The provincial board of health approved of the scheme and therefore there was no necessity for an appeal to the people. It provided five acres of land on Logan avenue and will spend this year $400,000 in housing two hundred families. The features of the scheme are central heating plant, hot water for domestic purposes, and grass courts for the children of the tenements to play on. There has also been leased from the general hospital trust land on which it is proposed to spend $55,000, and house thirty-eight families. The plan of building is the same in every case. An additional $85,000 was spent in purchasing lots on St. Clair avenue, and another $100,000 is being spent in houses which will accommodate the working classes. They are purchasable on easy terms.

One does not see much slum life in Kingston; indeed, there is no slum life of the kind which is described in the larger cities, especially Europe. An article recently appeared in the London Chronicle descriptive of housing conditions in Glasgow, and an exhibit, through the tenements, of squalor, suffering, dirt, and distress which was extreme in its character. Bad housing is at the bottom of many of the labor troubles. It is at the bottom of the great labor troubles in Dublin, and these troubles have been emphasized by the recent strike. Upon this strike syndicalism stakes its all for success. The poverty of the people was deplorable. The latest reports indicated that the infantile mortality was very high. "How could it be otherwise?" suggests a writer, "when the babe moves its tiny arms in an atmosphere laden with germs of death." Some 21,133 persons live in one-room tenements, and forty-three per cent. of the people of the Irish capital die in workhouses, hospitals, lunatic asylums, and prisons.

God save us in Canada, from such an experience. Canada must provide against slum life as early as possible. The local conditions are not bad, but there is a crowding of tenants and sooner or later there will have to be rentable houses, lots of them, for the accommodation of the working classes, with air spaces around them, and house free from taints of every kind. When that time comes it will be comfortable to know that the law provides for aid through the municipalities, and to the extent of eighty-five per cent. of the cost.

Reference was made to the workmen's compensation act on which Chief Justice Meredith had spent so much time, and which, despite the opposition that was offered to it by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, was pronounced by Actuary Dawson the best measure of the kind in twenty states and provinces.

All this was for the good of the working classes, and yet the labor outlook was discouraging. Politically it was very bad. Though peace was preached the nations were spending their money in millions in preparing for war. Industrially the situation was no better. The masses, through their unions, were piling up all they could for a great and coming struggle.

Syndicalism had failed in France, where it had originated, but was being advocated in England, and it was finding favor with some branches of the labor party. The United Kingdom's Employers' Defence had depicted, in a prospectus, the coming day of conflict between capital and labor, between the federations of men and of masters, in "a deadly grapple beneath the central blue."

FARMER OUT ON SPIEE

A farmer, living near the city on Monday, and met with trouble. He was very much intoxicated, when driving out Division street in the afternoon, and when near St. Mary's cemetery, started trouble. Some men working near by tried to quiet him but the proposition was too big for them, and a call was sent to the police. The farmer was bound he would return to the city, but the men held him there until Constables Naylor and Bateson drove out in a cab and took him in charge. Mr. Farmer and his sleigh then headed for the police station. The accused was locked up and his outfit taken to a hotel. At nine o'clock in the evening a relative secured the release of the tippler and took him home.

Weather Notes.

Pressure is comparatively low in the south-west states and Eastern Canada, and highest in Manitoba. Fair, moderately cold weather prevails throughout Canada.

AT THE GRAND

In his latest play, "Broadway Jones," which comes to the Grand to-night, George M. Cohan, the brilliant young playwright, has taken a young New Yorker, known as "Broadway Jones," for his central character. Jones is a man about town, and when the first act opens he is just returning from one of his frequent hilarious sessions which do not permit of an early home-coming. Although he is popularly supposed to be very wealthy, he has really come to the end of his string, and is not only penniless, but heavily in debt. In desperation he engages himself to a wealthy old widow—old enough to be his mother, and though his friends try to dissuade him from going through with his agreement, he sees in it his only salvation, and is fully determined to marry her. But good fortune has not deserted him entirely, and just as things look blackest for him, he receives word that a wealthy uncle has died, leaving him heir to a chewing gum factory in Jerseyville, Conn.

Alice Lloyd Dance Mad

William Morris, who is presenting Alice Lloyd and her company of seventy entertainers at the Grand on Wednesday, March 11th, has arranged an attraction that is something out of the ordinary to local theatre-goers. In fact, an exact reproduction of an English music hall, such as offered at the Empire theatre, London, and the "Follies Marigny," Paris.

Always ready to present an innovation so far as the theatre is concerned, Mr. Morris has arranged to place on the programme one of the biggest features of the twentieth century. This feature will take place immediately after the intermission of the first half of this monster entertainment and is entitled "Dance Mad." Every form of dancing, including the sensational "X-Ray Dance," will be illustrated by artists who have the greatest respect for the terpsichorean art, and no doubt this will prove the sensation of the Lloyd company entertainment.

AN ANNIVERSARY TEA

By the Princess Street Methodist Congregation.

Princess Street Methodist church anniversary tea was held on Monday evening. Supper commenced at 6.30 o'clock and lasted until eight afterwards, in addition to a splendid number of musical selections being rendered, clergymen from sister Methodist churches were called upon to give short addresses.

T. F. Harrison was chairman of the evening and first called upon Rev. E. G. Robinson, who said that so far, $147, had been raised at the anniversary services on Sunday exclusive of the amount which would be received from the tea. Mr. Robinson hoped that when all funds were in $250 will be realized. The pastor also spoke highly of the young people's society and the aid it gave to the official board. In no other Methodist church did all the societies work together in such union.

Rev. J. Webster, pastor of Brook Street Methodist church dealt with his early experience in the ministry. He also spoke of the happiness in his work.

Rev. A. Brown, pastor of Spenceham Methodist church, stated that no church could be successful where sociability was lacking. It is not enough to merely invite strangers into the church, but it is also our duty to make them feel at home after they are invited.

The musical numbers included solos by Miss Agnes Brebner, Miss Anna Timmerman, Allen Haffner, and a duet by Messrs. Allen and Frederick Haffner.
