The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure
Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This recipe makes 10 ounces of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.
Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, sore
throat, asthma, throat troubles, etc.
Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents worth) in a 4-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly.
Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.
Pinex is one of the oldest and best-known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in quinine and all the other natural, healing elements.
Other preparations will not work in this form.
The prompt results from this recipe
have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.
A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with each bottle. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

FOUND LOST TRIBE

OF INDIANS' WHELLE ON A VISIT TO QUEBEC

Professor Speck Says He Has Located
Five Families of the Wawa-nocks, Missing 187 Years.

Philadelphia, March 24.—Prof. F. Speck, of the University of Pennsylvania, is preparing a report on a tribe of Indians lost for 187 years, which he found unexpectedly on a recent trip to the province of Quebec. The tribe was known as the Wawa-nocks, once one of the strong tribes of New England. Five families are all the remnant.

A guide whom Prof. Speck employed to direct him in his research trip to the Indian country told him of a people whom he called "Walinkiak," meaning "People of the Bay," living on the Beauport River, near Montserrat. Taking the guide with him, Prof. Speck visited the tribe. He found only one old man, Neptune, who spoke the original language of the tribe.

From Neptune Prof. Speck learned another version of the historically celebrated massacre of Noreddigweck in Maine, where the Wawa-nocks formerly lived. Whittier in his poem, "Moss Megone," uses the massacre as the theme of an eulogy on Father Rasko, who is pictured as a martyr and hero.

Neptune's story of the massacre differs from the historical one. According to the story given to Mr. Speck by the Indian, when Gen. Lovell, with the British troops, came within a few miles of Noreddigweck, he sent a friendly Indian to Father Rasko, to ask him to come secretly to him for an interview. Father Rasko met the general and accepted a bag of gold upon agreeing to call the Indians of his tribe together for a council on the following day.

Father Rasko gathered the tribe together in a church and the English troops fell on them, setting fire to the church and shooting the Indians as they fled. An Indian, believing that Father Rasko had betrayed them, shot him as he fled.

COMMISSION RULE IN LEEDS

Experiment of Yorkshire Town is Watched With Interest.

London, March 24.—Leeds is making an experiment in municipal administration, new to England but popular in America and Canadian cities, under the name of commission government.

The innovation followed the recent strike of municipal employees, the investigation into which revealed a lack of co-ordination in labor matters between the municipal departments and also a tendency to regard municipal employment as political spoil.

The municipal administration of Leeds will be concentrated in the hands of a small commission, which can be held more responsible than is possible in the case of a large city council. If the Yorkshire experiment proves successful, it is suggested that the London County Council might advantageously follow suit and even go the length of engaging a general manager.

A salary of $50,000, it is urged, would not be excessive for a good man, who would undoubtedly be able to make a large reduction in the present expenditures, caused by the present system of government in the metropolis.

WERE MANY DEATHS

Fatalities in Coal Mines Show Big Increase

Washington, March 24.—The Year 1913 was more fatal for coal miners in the United States than the preceding twelve months. A report issued by the bureau of mines showed an increase of fatalities of 425 over 1912, and twelve deaths for every working day in the year. In the army of 723,365 underground workers, 2,785 perished, a fatality rate of 3.82 in every 1,000 men employed, as compared with 3.27 in 1912.

Six thousand more men were employed in 1913 and the increase in production was between thirty and forty million tons.

The states in which the greatest number of deaths occurred were: Pennsylvania, 1,227; West Virginia, 327; New Mexico, 272; Ohio, 165; Illinois, 164; Alabama, 124; Colorado, 108.

That portion of an ad. reading "I am a church member and well fixed financially, but am lonesome," appealed to Mrs. Houston and she started the correspondence.

Sent For Trial

Hamilton, Ont., March 20.—Behind closed doors at the police court A. E. Mackay and James Gove, prominent men, who figure in one of the biggest sensations that the police have sprung in some time, heard the partial result of the investigation which Deputy-Chief Whately and plain clothesmen have been conducting since last summer.

The police had a dozen girl witnesses and a number of others. Their evidence, it is said, laid bare a scandal which has been on the public tongue for months past.

The accused were committed for trial.

VISITS PRINCE'S TENANTS

King George Helping to Solve Housing Problem.

London, March 24.—"I have come to inspect the cottages and flats built for my son. May the queen and I come in."

With this simple question on his lips King George, accompanied by Queen Mary, visited the workmen's houses erected on the Prince of Wales's property at Kennington, one of the slum districts of London, which his majesty is cleaning up.

The visit was productive of several amusing incidents. One old charwoman described Queen Mary as "a real fine lady." Another woman tried hurriedly to conceal a bottle of stout ready on the table for her husband's luncheon till the royal visitors laughed.

"I am anxious to make provision for the lower middle classes," said the king in conversation with a tenant of one of the cottages. "I am also anxious for the welfare of the working classes, but in London I realized that a man of the lower middle class finds difficulty in procuring a house within his means which is not too far from the centre. I had that man in view when I decided to have these dwellings erected for my son, for the problem is a serious one for hundreds in London to-day."

WAS NEWS TO ALFONSO

Learns From Picture How Henry IV. Met Death

London, March 24.—A curious little story is told about King Alfonso of Spain. He recently visited Bayonne and inspected the local museum, which contained, among other treasures, a realistic picture of the death of Henry IV. of France.

After looking intently at the picture King Alfonso suddenly exclaimed: "But Henry is not dying a natural death!"

"Of course," remarked one of the French guides, diplomatically, "Your majesty remembers that Henry was assassinated."

But King Alfonso did not remember.

"By whom was he killed, then?" he asked.

"He was killed by a monk named Ravallac," said the guide.

Then the king appeared to comprehend, for he exclaimed: "A king killed by a monk. Now I understand why the story was never told me."

Russian Writer Charged With Blasphemy in His Novel

St. Petersburg, March 24.—Court proceedings are to be brought immediately against the Russian novelist, on a charge of blasphemy. The charge is preferred in connection with his novel entitled "Mother," in which he is alleged to have insulted the national faith. It found guilty the novelist's sentence, according to the Russian law, would be exile to Siberia, which, in his present state of health, his friends believe would be equivalent to a sentence of death.

Electric Waiters

An electric invention, which, it is claimed, will do away with waiters in restaurants and hotels is being experimented with each table in the restaurant is to be fitted with a frame bearing the menu and a series of electric "press" buttons corresponding to the items on the menu. The customer sits down before the already laid table, with a neat pile of plates and glistening silver on one side, chooses the dish which he prefers, and presses the corresponding buttons in turn.

In the kitchen of the restaurant the number of the table and the number of the course required are signalled on a screen to the chefs and their assistants, and in a few seconds a steaming hot dish appears in a little lift at the side of the diner's table.

The customer helps himself, presses a button, and the dish disappears as quietly as it came, leaving at the side of the plate a little aluminium ticket indicating the sum to be paid.

A By-Path of Science

The late Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, during his long years of active work as a physician and scientist, and his thirty years or so of production as a novelist and poet, explored many fields. No subject that he studied, either scientific or social, is more curious than the one he described in a little-known paper, entitled "Of Altruophobia, and the Power to Be Conscious of the Cat as Near, When Unseen and Unheard."

In this paper Dr. Mitchell declares that there are persons who have been able to distinguish the presence of a cat by its smell, but cannot any longer do so, and yet who retain ability to detect unseen cats.

"It is likely," he says, "that the cat emanations may affect the nervous system through the nasal membrane, although unrecognized as odors. Why these emanations should, if plainly perceived at all, cause certain symptoms in those who dread cats, is readily understood.

"The ultimate cause of unreasonable terror of cats I cannot explain."

ORIGIN OF DWARFS

Perpetual Childhood Affects Some of the Little People

Dwarfs have always been a puzzle to scientists whether they are human beings, animals or plants. Some of the difficulties of understanding the origin of the human ones were cleared away the other day by Professor Hastings Gilford in his first Hunterian Lecture at the Royal College of Surgeons, London.

Of course, there are whole races of dwarfish human beings, but the kind of person who especially deserves the name is one who is conspicuously small amongst his own people. Most of these eccentric little folk, often called midgets, are really, according to Professor Gilford, endowed with the gift of perpetual youth—not altogether a desirable gift, as any reader of fairy tales will know. It was, often thought, he said, that midgets were people whose growth had suddenly been arrested. This was not so. The professor pointed out that in many cases "the so-called dwarfs or midgets" are not in reality the result of a stoppage of growth, but rather of a protracted delay in development, so that they remain infants all their lives. When they grow old, as they often do, their infantile characteristics still persist, in spite of their wizened appearance.

Dr. Gilford gave many quaint instances where their smallness and their babylike minds stood dwarfs in good stead. One midgetkin, he said, travelled wherever he cared to go on the railway with half a ticket until he was thirty years old; another intelligent child of fourteen years got through more easily still, for his mother or any other woman who cared to assume the responsibility, could carry him about as a baby in arms.

This intense prolongation of the period of childhood was really something very much akin to a disease. The lecturer classified it into many forms, but said of the many specimens he had met and examined: "They seem to be intelligent and captivating little people, their intelligence being of the childish pattern, such as might be expected of young people who had gathered years of experience. They never seem to be spoiled or even embarrassed by the attentions they receive from the public, but show quaint childish traits and a charming naïveté which make them great favorites with those who have dealings with them."

Science naturally divides dwarfs into many kinds, but two of these are quite distinct. In one class the bones grow harder with age, instead of remaining, as in the other class, gristly like those of little children. When as in the other case, the bones begin to harden, other changes often happen and the midgets become a strange compound of adult and child. "They often rejoice," said Professor Gilford, "in beards and mustaches, and some of them have become the proud fathers and mothers of diminutive beings like themselves. The celebrated Tom Thumb was an example of this kind of 'arrested' and it is well known he married a miniature lady who was also an albino, and who presented him with a daughter."

Dr. Harvey Wiley, former chief of the bureau of chemistry, and universally admitted to be one of the greatest authorities on pure foods and dietetics in the world, says:

"Eat oranges, eat them in winter, eat them in summer; eat as many as you can afford to buy; they are better for you than physic. Oranges are excellent for people. It is good to eat oranges for breakfast, and also for dinner—not from a medical, but an anti-medical standpoint. Both oranges and lemons ought to be used as freely as the financial ability of the consumer may permit. A laboring man may not be able always to eat oranges at breakfast, yet the fruit is usually very cheap and the consumption of it will obviate the need of physic, and save many a doctor's bill."

Rarest Thing Possible

When Sir Belduchamp was appointed to his first post in India, one of his subordinates who did not know him, tried to find out from a brother officer what sort of a man they would have to deal with. The dialogue went something like this:

"Does he play bridge much?"

"Not much."

"Billiards, maybe?"

"Nothing to speak of."

"Any good at chess?"

"He plays badly."

"Does he go in for any outdoor sports?"

"At long intervals."

"Then what on earth does he do?" asked the bewildered man finally.

"The rarest thing possible," snapped the other; "he works."—Pearson's Weekly.
