TAKING OF EVIDENCE

WAS CONCLUDED IN A SUIT FOR DAMAGES

Several Witnesses Heard Thursday Morning in the Case of a Young Russian Injured While Working on Railway Construction — Sink Hole Blamed for Trouble.

The case of Joseph Kurakinch vs. J. P. Mullarkey, for injuries received in an accident on the Canadian Northern railway, was resumed on Thursday morning, at the spring assizes, Messrs. Farrell and Day appearing on behalf of the plaintiff and H. S. Rose, Toronto, for the defence. The evidence taken in the case on Wednesday appears in the Whig's second section.

Mr. Day called Peter McCoy, a railway construction contractor, and questioned him regarding the methods used in lifting tracks for sink holes.

Donald A. Swanson, employed as timekeeper for Contractor Mullarkey, was called by Mr. Rose. He said his duties called him to go over the line of construction twice every day. A time-sheet was produced for June 16th, the day the Russian claimed he was injured, and witness swore that on this day Kurakinch was credited with working ten hours.

"On June 16th did you hear of any accident?" asked Mr. Rose.

"No, I heard of no accident." Witness added that his first intimation of the accident to the young Russian was about a month ago, when witness was on another job. It was his duty to send in reports of all accidents to men to headquarters inside of twenty-four hours. He had made no such report regarding anything occurring on June 16th. Later, witness told of finding Kurakinch ill in his bunk two days after the accident and had the doctor see him afterwards removing him to Sydenham and then to Kingston.

Mr. Farrell questioned witness about how he could pick out June 16th and swear that the plaintiff worked ten hours on this date. He was able to swear to this on the foreman's report. Regarding the condition of the road, he would swear that on the day in question the track was not submerged in water. Witness admitted the company had been having a great deal of trouble with sink holes.

Dr. F. R. Sargeant, of Sydenham, said he had visited the construction camp on June 18th and examined a Russian workman. He could not say if the plaintiff was the man as he could not recognize him. He made inquiries but was given no information about the man having been injured. He could not say what was the matter with him. He did not talk as if he had been hurt.

To Mr. Farrell, witness said it was not his suggestion the injured man was brought to the Hotel Dieu. Valdo Fleming, engineer employed on the construction, was asked by Mr. Rose as to the general nature of the sink hole. He said in the spring there was water in it but this always went away by June 1st. From that time on till fall, it was dry. Witness said he had received no report of any accident to the plaintiff.

Peter Andoin, Montreal, who was a foreman in the construction work, told of seeing the plaintiff. The latter told him he was sick and had pains in his side. He told witness something about lifting a "jack" but did not mention anything about a tie giving away.

Charles Jane, conductor on a ballast train, said he did not remember the plaintiff being carried on his train, and did not know there had been an accident until Thursday last. Asked about the roadway at scene of accident, witness said there was no water alongside the track.

James L. Eno, a foreman in the construction work, said he never knew of the accident to the plaintiff. He thought the plaintiff worked ten hours the day, he said he had been injured. Pressed by Mr. Farrell witness said he had no reason to disbelieve the story of the plaintiff that he had been injured. Witness knew the timekeeper and stated there were times when he did not go over the road twice a day, and would secure his reports from the witness. Witness could not recollect the condition of the sides of the railway.

Mr. Farrell produced a report of the witness for June 16th and when questioned the witness stated that there were numbers on it which had not been made by him. The numbers had to do with the men employed. Each man had a number and he was so registered.

Witness to Mr. Rose, said he did not charge forgery in the report. The timekeeper or his assistant would sometimes check over the report at night and put in some numbers which had been missed.

Donald Swanson, timekeeper, was recalled by Mr. Rose and questioned about figures on the foreman's report which he disclaimed. He said the figures were not his.

The plaintiff was then recalled and was asked by Mr. Farrell if there was sand on both sides of the railway track, so that so that a person could walk.

To this witness said "no," adding that if a person walked on the side of the track he would have to go ankle-deep through mud.

One of the Russian workmen who gave evidence was also recalled and he stated that there was no sand at the side of the track to walk upon.

The taking of evidence in the case was concluded at 1 p.m., when argument was made until 2 o'clock.

After the evidence had been heard the parties got together and the defendant offered the plaintiff $650 in full of a settlement. The offer was accepted and the case did not go to the jury, a settlement being reported to his lordship.
