YOUNG RUSSIAN SUES

FOR DAMAGES AT THE FALL ASSIZES

Was Injured Last June While Working for Contractor Doing Construction Work For C.N.R. at Sink Hole Near Perth Road

Joseph Kurakevich, aged twenty-one, a Russian, who cannot speak one word of English, was plaintiff in a case which came before Mr. Justice Sutherland at the spring assizes, which opened here on Wednesday afternoon.

The plaintiff was employed by J. P. Mullarkey, contractor in charge of construction work for the Canadian Northern railway at Perth Road, and put in a claim for damages, as a result of an accident he met with while at work on June 16th, 1913. He, with a gang of workmen were engaged in raising the tracks at the scene of the much-talked-of sink hole. One of the ties gave way with him, causing the accident. Plaintiff claimed that the accident was due to negligence on the part of his employer.

Messrs. Farrell and Day appeared for the plaintiff, and W. N. Tilley, of Toronto, for the defence.

An interpreter was required to secure the evidence of the plaintiff and two other Russian fellow workmen, and Samuel Lazsoff, of Kingston, was sworn in for the work. Owing to the fact that the evidence had to be interpreted, the spurring of all the evidence took up considerable time.

Plaintiff stated that he had started to work on this job on April 22nd, and the accident he met with occurred on June 16th. The rails were being "jacked" up. Witness was walking along with a "jack" in his hand, when one of the ties gave way, and the witness fell. His knee cap was injured, and he also suffered other injuries to his body. After the accident, he was placed in a car and carried to the camp by some of the men. He remained in the camp five days, when the timekeeper and four men removed him to Sydenham, and later was brought to the Hotel Dieu in Kingston. He remained in the Hotel Dieu until September 4th. Then he returned to the railway camp to resume his work, but was not allowed to stay, the boss telling him that he could not do the work. At this time, witness said, one of his knees was badly swollen. He was receiving $2 per day from the company. His bill at the Hotel Dieu, as produced in court, amounted to $139.

Benedict Shutt and Joseph Gellico, Russian workmen, were called, and told of the accident. The former saw the injured workman the night after the accident, and said he suffered great pains.

The plaintiff walked to the witness box with the assistance of a cane. Dr. Robert Hanley said he was in the Hotel Dieu when the injured man was brought in, and found that the man could not straighten his limbs. He doubted if he would ever have the proper use of his limbs.

Dr. F. Etherington said he had been called to see the patient by Dr. Hanley. The latter told him that he had a patient suffering from injuries to his limbs who was not making progress. Witness had examined the patient with the idea of operating, but had decided not to operate. The improvement of the patient in the past two months had been very slow, and with the same progress continuing, there might be a chance of permanent recovery. At present he was not in condition to do ordinary laboring work.

EDMONTON FLOURISHING

Mayor Describes Success of Commission Government

Montreal, March 25.—W. J. Macnamara, mayor of Edmonton, Alberta, left for New York following a short stay in Montreal, following visits to Toronto and Ottawa. In an interview Mayor Macnamara expressed some interesting views on civic government, and declared that the elective commission form of government, recently adopted by Edmonton, had proved an entire success. If all cities adopted it, he believed, graft would receive its death blow. Under the system in vogue in Edmonton, the mayor was responsible for the civic finances, including assessment, cost of engineer's department, central administration, and stores and works. The first controller takes charge of the operation of public utilities, such as the power plant, street railways, waterworks, electric light, and telephones. The second controller looks after public works, including sewers, paving, walks, grading, building and construction. The two remaining controllers are charged with the conducting of the street cleaning, police, fire, health and relief departments. Under this system all departments are carried on efficiently and there is little chance for graft to creep in.

The Edmonton system of single taxation had also justified its adoption, said Mayor Macnamara. Edmonton had come through the late depression with signal success. Its assessment amounted to $187,000,000 and the unused borrowing powers were $29,000,000.

CANADA NEEDS QUALITY
Unprofitable to Crowd Country With Inefficient Immigrants

London, March 25.—Dr. Drysdale, who is famous for his advocacy of the theory that the birth rate of a nation should be a matter of quality rather than of quantity, spoke on the imperial aspect of the subject before the Royal Colonial Institute. Referring to Canada the speaker said that the increase of the birth rate in Ontario to twenty-five per thousand had been accompanied, not by a corresponding rise in the natural increase, but by an increase in the death rate to fourteen per thousand. The additional births appear to have populated the graveyards rather than the country. Toronto was a most striking example of this phenomenon. Canada would be able to support an immense population some day, but any attempt to crowd it rapidly with children of inefficient town-bred immigrants would only raise the death rate.

FAIL TO ROUSE LONDON
South African Deportees Now Touring Provinces

London, March 25.—Having failed to rouse London to any great pitch of indignation, the nine deported South African labor leaders are now touring the industrial cities of the United Kingdom, under the auspices of the National labor party, with the object of evoking sympathy. At Glasgow, before an audience of 3,000 persons, they vituperated Premier Bothera and Gen. Smuts, and declared their intention of returning to South Africa.
