How a cut led to 4 years of suffering

Mr. J. E. Arsenault, a Justice of the Peace and station master at Wellington on the P.E.I. Ry., says: "Four years ago I fell on a freight truck, sustaining a bad cut on the front of my leg. I thought this would heal, but instead it developed into a bad ulcer, and later into a form of eczema which spread very rapidly and also started on the other leg. Both legs became so swollen and sore that I could only go about my work by having them bandaged."
 "I consulted two doctors, and tried all the salves, liniments and lotions I heard of, but instead of getting better, I got worse."

How Zam-Buk cured.

"This was my condition when I got my first box of Zam-Buk. Greatly to my delight that first box gave me relief. I continued to apply it to the sores, and day by day they got better. I could see that at last I had got hold of something which would cure me, and in the end it did."
 "It is now over a year since Zam-Buk worked a cure in my case, and there has been no return of the eczema."
 Purply herbal in composition, Zam-Buk is a sure cure for all skin diseases, eczema, chapped hands, ulcers, blood-poisoning, varicose sores, piles, ringworms, inflamed patches, cuts, burns and bruises. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

IF YOUR BACK HURTS OR BLADDER BOTHERS, DRINK LOTS OF WATER.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 600 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.
 Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.
 Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. Agent, Geo. W. Mahood.

The Cabeman
 AN EXCITING PRESENT-DAY ROMANCE
 BY WEATHERBY CHESNEY

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

"And they took them in the Caldeira!" said Varney. "Is it not enough for that?"
 "A few degrees below boiling point. Put your hand in and see."
 "No, thanks. I'll take your word for it. That's the cheapest kind of whole sale cooking I ever heard of."
 "Food needs to be cheap in a country where expense is a good day's wage," said Scarborough. "Portunately it is cheap. The lupin grows like a weed; steeping in the sea picks the beans; and the Caldeira cooks them. Our friend there probably comes here every day. It's his trade."
 "Then he may have seen something of what happened yesterday," suggested Varney. "Ask him. You speak Portuguese."
 The man had slung his sack across the donkey's back, and seated himself on the top of it. His seat was a hot and wet one but he seemed to find it comfortable. He held his cigarette and urged his beast towards the narrow entrance between the walls of pumice.
 Scarborough approached him, and the man, with the red politeness of the islanders, jumped to the ground and took his hat off.
 "Bom dia, senhores," he said.
 Scarborough returned his greeting, and asked whether he had heard anything of a dead man having been found there this morning.
 "Sim, senhor," was the answer. "It was I who found it."
 Then he went on to describe the episode with voluble earnestness and a wealth of dramatic gesture. The finding of a dead man was an event in his life, and he had the historic ability to make the most of his share in the occurrence. He entered into the explanations not only of what he had done in this alarming crisis, but also, minutely and comprehensively, of what he had thought. He explained that his first impulse had been to carry the news to the Corregidor at Ribeira Grande; for few Portuguese will touch a dead man, or help a dying man, until officialdom has given the word, for fear lest, if foul play has been done, they may be summoned as accomplices. The peasantry have a firm belief that the dead hand which touches a dying man, is by the law of the land presumed to be the hand which gave him death; and it is a belief which in one well authenticated instance left a man who had been injured on the railroad, a few miles from Coimbra, the intellectual capital of Portugal, to his unaided through the heat of a long summer's day. He was conscious, and able to beg for water. But no one dared to give him any, for the Corregidor had been summoned, and nothing could be done till he came. And this is not an isolated case. But this Azorean peasant explained, and took pride in explaining, that he had risen superior to this fear.
 "I helped to carry him," he said proudly.
 "You helped? Then you were not alone?"
 "I was alone at first, but I went to the Casa Davis, which is near here, and summoned the Senhor Davis. We carried the dead man to Senhor Davis's cart, which waited at the end of the gorge, and Senhor Davis drove him to the house which is called As Chinelas. I did not go with him. I had done enough; for, Senhores, the Corregidor had said that the body was to be moved."
 "What is he saying?" asked Varney in English.
 "He is claiming to be a hero because he dared to touch a corpse," said Scarborough; and to the man added: "Was that all?"
 "What does the Senhor mean?"
 "Did you see anything which suggested how the dead man met his death?"
 "I, Senhor? No! Why should the Senhor suspect me?"
 "I don't suspect you," said Scarborough, rather impatiently. "I only want to know what you saw. You say you saw nothing?"
 A gleam came into the man's eye. He hesitated a moment, and then he said cunningly:
 "I am a poor man, Senhor. A poor man cannot afford to keep his eyes so wide open as richer men may. I say that I saw nothing."
 Scarborough put his hand in his pocket and pulled out a misere note.
 "Think again," he said quietly.
 "Were your eyes quite shut?"
 "No, Senhor, no quite," said the Azorean.
 "What did you see?"
 "I saw that the fingers of the dead man's right hand were tightly closed. There was something in the hand. I gave it to the fingers gently. It was only a flat stone with some scum on it."
 "Have you got the stone?"
 "Sim, Senhor. It is a thing of no value. I keep it to remind me of the tragic affair in which I assisted this morning. A poor bean-seller's life is uneventful, Senhor."
 "I will buy it from you," said Scarborough. "Two miseres."
 The man put his hand into his pocket.
 "Five," he said insistently.
 "Very well, five."
 The bean-seller produced the stone and gave it to Scarborough. It was, as he said, a small flat stone, about three inches square. It was covered with the white incrustation caused by the Caldeira water, and there were marks on it where something had been rubbing in pencil. But half a day's work in the pocket of a peasant's blouse had obliterated most of them, and those that were still legible owed their preservation to the fact that they were in the hollows of the stone's surface.
 "What is it?" said Varney.
 "It was a message, but this fool has rubbed it out of it. Can you make sense of it?"
 Varney examined the stone closely. "ache . . . blue . . . N. drip" was all that remained of the writing.
 "It isn't much," he said. "But it may be the clue we want."
 "To the mine?"
 "No, to the diamonds," ache, looks green or sickly.

uncommonly like the end of the cache, and the rest tells where the cache is."
 "Or did tell, before this idiot's blouse rubbed it out."
 "Stay, though! There is another possibility," said Varney. "Mrs. Carington's name is Rachel. Perhaps it is not a C that has gone, but an R and an L. This stone may have carried a dying man's last message to his wife. What next, Horace?"
 "We'll go and see Davis."

CHAPTER IX.
The Hooded Woman
 "If you want my opinion," said Mr. Davis, when he had heard what Scarborough had to tell him, "there is a woman in it."
 His daughter, who was standing behind him, exchanged a quiet glance with the two young men, and shrugged her shoulders slightly. She was a dainty little blonde, with big eyes which tried to look earnest, and managed to look dreamy.
 "That's what you always say, father," she said.
 "Smiling," he admitted, "I believe it is a somewhat frequent remark of mine. Generally true, too."
 Muriel frowned.
 "I don't see why you should suppose that a woman had anything to do with it," she insisted.
 "No? But you will find that, as usual, I shall turn out to be right."
 Mr. Davis backed this confident judgment with the ghost of a wink to Varney, and laughed. The discussion which threatened was one which frequently arose in this household; for Muriel, having spent the thinking years of her life—not, as yet, a very long one—in the seclusion of a lonely pine-apple quinta, was an aggressive disputant, and made up by the violence of her views on the wrongs of her world, the total lack of practical knowledge of her subject. Her daily life from the time she was fourteen had been almost conventual in its simplicity; she had had no opportunity of verifying by the observation of actualities the opinions which she held so strongly; therefore she was never troubled with doubts. If there was another side to the question, her favorite novels did not reach it, and no one had ever made her see it. To be perfectly frank, no one had ever seriously tried to argue with her, and his efforts, except her father, and his efforts were chiefly aimed at drawing her out. He opposed her, for the sake of seeing her eyes lose their dreamy look in a flash of temper, and her color rise with indignation; and when he had noticed her into saying something which was chiefly aimed at drawing her out, he would usually cut her off, and chuckle and owned meekly that she was right. He was almost absurdly proud of his fanatical little daughter.

Varney did not know that this episode was part of the daily routine at the pine-apple quinta, and was enjoyed by both father and daughter; consequently he was inclined to be angry at that wink. For Muriel Davis was very pretty.
 "If you mean," he said, "that there is a woman at the bottom of most of the good deeds that are done in the world, I am ready to agree with you."
 "And Muriel will agree with you, and think you are a very sensible fellow," said Mr. Davis, laughing. "But I meant there is a woman in every piece of mischief that is done, and always on this side of the Golden River! And I won't say that the same state of things may't obtain on the other side, too," he added, chuckling.
 "Have you any reason for thinking that there is a woman in this case?" said Scarborough. He knew the tendency of all discussion at the Casa Davis, and expected him that, if he was to get any useful information, both father and daughter would have to be kept to the point.
 "Yes," said Mr. Davis.
 "Father means that he has the same reason that he usually has," opined Muriel. "You know how prejudiced he is."
 Scarborough made a slight movement of impatience, and Mr. Davis noted it. He became grave at once.
 "You are quite right," he said, answering Scarborough's glance. "Muriel, our levity is rebuked, and I think we deserve it. I say that there is a woman in this case, because I saw her."

(To be continued)

A multitude of sins show through the charity that is supposed to cover them.

"CASCARETS" ALWAYS STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

If Constive, Headache, Biliousness, Stomach, Brea, Bad—Clean your Liver and Bowels. Get a 10-cent box now. You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have head-ache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with sick, gassy, disordered stomach or have backache and feel worn out.
 Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?
 Cascarets work the way you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.
 A Cascaret will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets or sickly.

ICE FIELDS DISAPPEAR
 Conditions Developing Fast for Opening of Navigation
 Detroit, Mich., March 26.—Reports from regular and display stations of the weather bureau of the United States and meteorological office of Canada indicate that ice fields have practically disappeared over the extreme western portion of Lake Superior, but extend beyond the vision of Keweenaw Point. Some fields are reported off Marquette, also over the eastern portion where they are moving with the winds. The ice in Whitefish Bay is solid. In St. Mary's river the ice ranges from eighteen to twenty-four inches and is not snow-covered. In Green Bay ice remains solid. In Lake Huron extensive fields are reported from Presque Isle south to Thunder Bay Island over the central and extreme southern portions and also along the eastern shore. St. Clair river is open to Recor's Point. The ice has been running freely from Lake St. Clair during the week. Over the extreme western ice fields have broken up and are disappearing; there is more open water along the south shore and the fields are drifting with the winds.
 In Lake Ontario the fields are rapidly disappearing and some harbors are open.

TO MARRY COUPLES FREE
 One of New Social Plans of Trinity Church
 Chicago, March 26.—Marriage ceremonies for which no fee will be accepted is one of the innovations which will be inaugurated at Trinity Episcopal church in case a fund of $10,000 a year can be raised to make possible the extension of the church's activities.
 "We wish to make historic Trinity something like the Little Church Around the Corner in New York," declared Andrew B. Sheriff, chairman of the campaign committee. "It is proposed to have a clergyman in attendance at all hours of the day and night to offer spiritual consolation, perform baptisms and marriage ceremonies, and attend to the physical needs of the poor. An after-midnight service on Sunday mornings for actors, newspaper people, and those detained downtown late is also probable, while the social centre work of the church will be greatly extended.
 At one time Trinity church had eighteen multi-millionaires as members of its congregation. Many of the wealthy members have moved away, making the task of maintaining the church a serious problem.

 Had $249,000 Stock in McVicker's Theatre, Which He Managed
 Chicago, March 26.—Solomon Litt, for years manager of McVicker's theatre in this city, and well-known in theatrical circles throughout America and Europe, left an estate valued at $400,000, according to an inventory filed to-day by his widow and executrix, Henrietta Litt. Stocks valued at $264,000 are listed, besides forty-seven shares of stock in the New York Theatre company, the value of which is not given. Of the stocks enumerated, $249,000 is represented by shares of the McVicker's Theatre company. Bonds, including railway, municipal and industrial interests, are listed at $118,900. The cash on hand in the Corn Exchange National bank and the Bank of Waukegan is given as $7,624.46.
 Among the miscellaneous entries is a membership in the Lambs club of New York, a half interest in the rights of production of the play "In Old Kentucky," and part interest in a theatre in Minneapolis.

DENONCES BOTHA GOVT
 Australian ex-Premier Declares SS. Ungeni a Slave
 London, March 26.—Speaking at Brisbane, ex-Premier Fisher strongly denounced the Botha government for deporting the nine labor leaders and announced that the federal leaders had decided publicly to support a movement which is on foot to have the deportees returned.
 Continuing, Mr. Fisher declared that the vessel which carried the deportees was as much a slave as any slave-ship of bygone days and the deported men ought to have stayed on board when the Ungeni arrived off London, thus having it open to seizure under the anti-slavery laws.
 Melbourne, Queensland, has decided to participate in the forthcoming Panama exhibition. All the commonwealth governments, with the single exception of Western Australia, have now declared their intention of exhibiting.

SCHOOL FOR BRIDES-TO-BE
 Six Months' Course in Housekeeping Planned in Cincinnati
 Cincinnati, March 26.—There will be no more "green" housekeeping brides. Cincinnati, in the assertion made by Superintendent of Schools Condon, who announced that a school for prospective brides would be started as soon as the finances of his department would permit.
 Each pupil will receive a six months' training in the art of being a genuine housewife. After taking the course the "bride-to-be" will be well qualified to cater for the family, should the cook strike, locate a leak in the water pipe, mend a broken door knob or put up a shelf, scrub, wash, iron, market, give first aid to an injured member of the family, darn stockings, lay a table in the most appropriate fashion, and, best of all, aid her husband by preventing that frightful waste in the American household.

Relations Not Altered
 Washington, March 26.—Carefully protected by the iron rule of custom against the vicissitudes of international politics, the external relations of Japan will remain unaffected by the resignation of the Japanese cabinet as a result of the disagreement of the two houses of parliament over the naval estimates.
 Consequently it is anticipated by the officials here that there will be no substantial change in the tone of the negotiations that have been in progress between the United States and Japan over the question of Japanese land ownership in this country.
