THE 14TH REGIMENT IN MARINE CIRCLES

A FORT RECORD OF 1885 FOUND AT ARMOURIES

The Regiment Loses Some Men Who Will Become Mariners — "D" Company First to Parade in New Khaki Uniform.

An old record of more than ordinary interest has been unearthed in the orderly room of the 14th Regiment at the armouries. It is a book used in connection with the administration of affairs in one of the companies stationed at Point Henry during the North-west rebellion. In 1885, at the outbreak of the Riel disturbance, the 14th battalion was assigned to garrison duty at Tete de Pont Barracks and Fort Henry. Two companies did duty at the fort for nearly two years. Capt. James Murray was the senior officer, at one time and commanded. His name is in the book, under date of March 1st, 1886.

A number of the officers, N.C.O.'s and men are alluded to. The following are some of the names which appear: Capt. Skinner, Lieut. Farrell, Sergt. Flinz, Lance-Corp. Gribble, Sergt. Anderson, Pte. T. Burton, S. M. Roberts, Corp. Bourne, Corp. Grange, Lance-Corps. Somers, Dick, Arniel and Monierief, Bugler Hayward, Corp. Bolderston, Ptes. Dewar and Davis, Lance-Corps. Goodfellow, Sergts. Cherry and Baker, etc.

Soldiers "Go A-sailing."

Some of the companies of the 14th are losing men who purpose to go sailing with the opening of navigation. They have informed their company commanders to the effect that, on this account it will be necessary to desert their rifles for the "sea."

The life of a sailor rather than soldiering this season for them.

"A," "C" and "G" companies drilled on Thursday, and "D," "E," and "F" on Friday evenings. "C" and "G" are the largest numerically, each being over forty strong.

"D" company was the first to parade in the new khaki uniform. The men presented a decidedly smart appearance.

Prov.-Lieut. E. W. Skinner has been posted to "D" company. Lieut. H. D. Wightman is the officer detailed for regimental duty next week.

STEAMER GERONIA TO BE EQUIPPED WITH WIRELESS

Steamer Gerona Arrived From Oswego With the First Cargo of Coal for Kingston—Captain Had Hard Time Getting Deck Hands

The work of installing the wireless apparatus on the steamer Geronia, owned by the Canadian Steamship line, which has been tied up at Swift's wharf, during the winter months, is being rushed along at rapid strides. The expert in the employment of the wireless company has been at work for a couple of days. The apparatus is to be installed at the aft end of the steamer. The men engaged in the work of installing the new boilers are rushing their work as fast as possible. The name of the steamer will be changed to Syracuse.

At certain times, deck hands are about as scarce as snow balls in summer time. Saturday morning, a captain who was very anxious to have his vessel clear, spent two or three hours scouring the city, in search of a couple of deckhands, but had a very hard time in landing the men he wanted.

"There has been a lot of talk about hard times around Kingston and other places," the captain said to the Whig but it is a very funny thing, we cannot get the deckhands to start out the season."

The steamer Gerona is the first of the local fleet, to make a trip to Oswego and return with coal. The vessel arrived on Friday, and had a fine trip, Capt. Smith is in command.

The schooner Abbie L. Andrews is in Oswego, waiting to be loaded. The steamer Huckleby cleared from Oswego, for Alexandria Bay, with coal.

The low barge Gladys H. is being fitted out at Oswego.

The steamer Windsor went on the Kingston Shipbuilding company's dry dock on Saturday. The steamer Sarnor came off the dry dock on Friday.

The schooner Ford River made the trip from here to Port Dalhousie in twenty-five hours.

Rose Berrigan, Livingstone avenue left for Milan, on Friday, where he will take over duties of mate on the steamer Turret Crown. The steamer Yorkton arrived in the city on Saturday morning. This is the first boat to enter Kingston harbor from the great lakes this spring.

Capt. Grois, of the steamer Carlton sailed on Saturday evening for Buffalo and from here to Fort William.
