Britain's Coal Bill.

Approximately 285,000,000 tons coal are annually consumed in the United Kingdom. A large portion of this-over 60,000,000 tons-is used for steam raising in factories while for domestic purposes 34,000, 000 tons are required, which is also nearly the figure of the iron and steel industries. Mines require 20, 000,000 tons, while gasworks use up only 15,000,000 and railways 13, 000,000 tons per annum.

HUMAN EYES LIKE PIGS.

Lids Responsible for Variations of Ocular Expression

Your eyes are like a pig's. If anybody told you so you would doubtless feel insulted. And yet such statement would be quite correct Your eyes are very much like a pig's - more so, indeed, than they are like any other animal's.

This is one of the most curious truths of physfology. A pig's eye so closely resembles that of a human being as to serve a very important practical purpose. Young men who are learning to be eye doctors are taught the rudiments of their business with the help of the pigs' eyes. They dissect them and practise all sorts of operations on them, from removing a cataract to the snipping of the muscles which control movements of the eyes in their orbits. If an oculist happens to puzzled about an operation he expects to perform, he sometimes gets one or more fresh pigs' eyes from the butcher and makes experiments

A pig's eye in a live pig's, head does not look much like a human eve. It is small and not very telligent in expression. When the pig is dead, however, and the eye is taken out it is hardly distinguishable from the eye of a person.

Human eyes do not vary much in size, and in themselves they have no expression whatever. When said that a person has large eyes means simply that the opening between the lids is larger than ordinary. It is the lids that are wholly responsible for ocular expression, which is capable of such wonderful litely. Variations.-New York American.

A method of deep boring through stone strata by means of steel chips and scrap has been developed in France and has proven very successful and economical. Steel scraps are forced under the boring head with the flushing water, the head being provided with saw-toothed projections which hold the chips until used up. The amount of steel chips to pe used varies, of course, with the nature of the stone to be bored. The cost of the new method compared with diamond drilling, other things
