WHEN SHE CAME

When Emory Cole came to the corner nearest his house he hesitated and then crossed over to the opposite side of the street.

As he neared the Maynard house he had a feeling that he was being observed. Emory was forty, but he was as shy and gentle as a girl.

Emory, relieved, turned and saw a little old woman half out of the window which she had raised in order to speak to him.

"Arzell's going to get you sure as fate less you outwit her," went on Mrs. Bramley.

"I will! I will!" Emory sighed. He had no thought of marrying. When he might have done so his mother would not allow it and now he had got out of the notion entirely.

Emory stood perfectly still staring at her. She was asleep. He stared at her slim, pretty, frail young shape; her hair, brown, as if it had been dipped in buttered dye.

They released her hand as if it were a thing he must be very careful of. "What's your name?" he asked.

"It's Elsie Grant. It was Elsie Barnes before I married Murry." Emory took a deep breath. "It's going to be Elsie Cole just as soon as we can walk over to the minister's and have it made so," he said in a stronger voice.

HE IS COMING HOME

WITH A NEW FACE AFTER WONDERFUL OPERATION. Baltimore, May 12.—Ross Allen, of Whiteby, Canada, the man with the new face, who had been discharged from St. Joseph's hospital before the end of the month if he continues to improve.

The final touch was given to the new face last week, and all that now remains is a shuiping up of the nose. Allen spoke with pride yesterday of the work of the hospital surgeons and took interest in the accomplishment of the wonderful work.

Allen's vitality pulled him through and the scars gradually healed. His facial disfigurement resulted in his coming to St. Joseph's. There by a skillful splicing his lips and mouth were formed for him. The corners of the mouth had to be slit neatly half an inch to allow the ends of the lips to be drawn together by the stitching.

When this phase of his face renewal had been completed a triangular piece of cartilage was cut from his breast and grafted to the forehead nose. The forehead skin had been silt to allow the "flange" of the cartilage section to be inserted.

This also knit, leaving only the nose to be covered with skin. This covering proved also a wonderful step. The forehead skin was cut in the shape of a shank with a bowl at the end, and with the shank cohering to the forehead, the piece was turned round down over the new nose structure.

London, May 14.—What is called an "unofficial" wages has been made by the bishop of London, and he wants Londoners to help him to win it. Speaking at a meeting in support of his fund for building churches in the metropolis the bishop said that a great banquet given in his honor in New York he made the "unofficial wages" it would not have done for a bishop to make a bet, he added, but he would make London a better square and soberer place, before they could make New York so. There was now a sort of friendly rivalry between the two nations as to which could make the finest town in the world.

Mr. Macadams, it is said, objected to M. Georges' attention to a young woman and asked him to desist. M. Georges paid no attention to the request. Macadams, who is the champion amateur boxer of the Latin quarter, then struck him on the jaw. According to witnesses, Georges was unconscious for five minutes and then presented his card to Mr. Macadams and was assisted from the room.

The Universal Popularity of CREX is not so much due to its low price, as to its natural artistic beauty and to the cheerful atmosphere it gives a room or porch. No longer is CREX considered appropriate only for porches, sun-parlors and summer homes. To-day, CREX coverings are found on most every floor of the home—the whole year round—and are giving the greatest satisfaction. A FEW OF THE REASONS WHY: 1. There's no raw material so durable and so cleanly as the impervious wire grass used in the manufacture of CREX. 2. The CREX exclusive method of spinning wire grass into twisted "threads" prevents ravel, adds strength and resiliency. 3. The compact weave and use of strongest warp-threads—makes CREX extra substantial. 4. They are sanitary, easy to keep clean and within the income of all housekeepers.
