I wish you would send me another box of your "Little Digesters." All the members of my family have been using them and have obtained the most satisfactory results. I congratulate you on your success in putting up a tablet for the cure of indigestion. I suffered for years and tried everything that was recommended to me. Nothing gave me relief, until I was persuaded to try "Little Digesters." Now I never suffer from indigestion. I enjoy my meals and am not afraid to eat, because I know a "Little Digester" after each meal will digest my food. I recommend them to all my friends who suffer from indigestion and would further say that you may publish the above if you wish. I know there are thousands of people suffering from indigestion who will be glad to know there is a safe and sure cure for them.

The DAUGHTER of DAVID KERR

By Harry King Toole Illustrations by KAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT BY A.C. McCLURG & CO., 1913

During her first weeks at Mrs. Gilbert's Gloria saw little of her father. She had at first frequently dropped in at his office, but he had intimated that it was no place for her. Sometimes she would be at Locust Lawn when Tom brought him home in the afternoon. When Judge Gilbert was home from Chicago once he dined with them. Every day, however, she talked to him for some time over the telephone. He always seemed interested, apologized for not seeing her more, and let her rattle on until she had quite exhausted the news of the day. Occasionally he complained to her of his rheumatism—no one had ever heard him speak of it before—and she would beg him to take good care of himself, since it was with him that she wished to dance first at her ball.

There was one girl whom Mrs. Gilbert sought as a friend for Gloria. She mentioned it to her husband the first day their guest arrived, and he suggested that she be invited to lunch the next day. Accordingly Mrs. Gilbert telephoned Miss Laura Piper and asked her for the following day, however, Miss Piper had an engagement. When several other days were mentioned she had engagements for those also. Could she have been made to accept Gloria, the task of conquering Belmont would instantly become less arduous. Her father was head of the great Piper Mining company, and her family was looked upon as one of the most exclusive in the whole state. If Laura Piper would, she could make it extremely pleasant for Gloria. But Laura Piper had her own way and her family's ideas about the Kerrs bred, and no matter how nice Gloria might be, she was still her father's daughter.

Mrs. Gilbert reported her lack of success to her husband on his return from his first trip to Chicago, and he mentioned it, almost casually, to her. The boss inquired the particulars, but made no comment. That he was not unkind of the episode developed two days later when the Piper Coal company received a complaint from the secretary of the school board that there was an undue quantity of slate in the last coal furnished the public schools. While worrying with this, the company's legal department sent word to the president that the city solicitor had just notified the company that one of the important spurs into an uptown coal yard crossed a street without authority of law.

Old man Piper swore by all the gods in mythology that it was the worst outrage ever perpetrated upon him in all his business life. He had but a day or two to catch his breath before Mrs. Gilbert telephoned at the dinner hour asking Laura to luncheon the next day. The whole thing dawned on him when Laura flounced back from the telephone and announced petulantly that she would not meet that odious Gloria Kerr. He said nothing until after dinner, then calling Laura aside he ordered her to telephone Mrs. Gilbert and withdraw her name. His pocket-book having been hit, Piper was willing to make some sacrifice to determine the reason and what he was to expect in the way of further attack. He kept his mouth closed, and waited. Laura returned from the luncheon with a favorable opinion of Gloria, but she could not forget her parentage. Upon being questioned she told her father she did not care to put Gloria on her visiting list.

"Suppose I have some one to visit me who asks: 'Who is that girl you introduced me to?' complained Laura. 'And I'll have to say: 'That's Gloria Kerr, the boss' daughter.' Then what will the visiting girl think of Belmont society, and what will she think of me? I'm sure I would be surprised if I went to visit anyone and they introduced me to the son or daughter of a man like Kerr."

"Laura," answered her father, "I think you'd better go down to New York for a couple of months." And two days later Laura went, after having called when Gloria was not at home. She never knew why her father urged her to go. Piper felt it would be cheaper to pay the expense of a New York trip than to have his company stand the continuous annoyance by which it could be worried, if what he suspected was true. When he inquired about coal for the school board the complaint department reported that the secretary had been mollified but hoped it would not happen again. As for the city solicitor, the legal department refrained from asking anything about the track across the street and that official never wrote again.

Old man Piper kept his mouth shut, but he knew he had been taught a lesson. Kerr was keeping a sharp eye on things, but his hand was suspected rather than seen in any move that was made. As the time for the ball approached, his rheumatism troubled him more and more, and upon the advice of Dr. Hayes he decided to go to Esmeralda Springs to drink the water. Sam Hayes took him down and came back with the comforting report that he was already better. He was not well enough, however, to return for the ball.

The ball given in honor of Miss Gloria Kerr at the Belmont club by Judge and Mrs. Gilbert was a memorable affair. The ballroom was crowded, and Gloria deserved the praise she received from every quarter on her beauty, her cleverness, and her light-hearted temperament. She did not hear the expressions of regret that she was the daughter of David Kerr. The next morning the Belmont banner had a two-column head over the story, and gave a long list of names preceded by "among those invited were," instead of by the usual "among those present were." There were a number notable by their absence, but there being a large crowd present and she being a stranger, Gloria did not know this. She was too busy with the men to think of what girls were present.

Truth to tell, it was a fairly representative assemblage, drawn together on account of regard for Judge and Mrs. Gilbert and also by curiosity to see what kind of girl Gloria Kerr was. If the president of the Piper Coal company had stopped the poker game at the Belmont club the night before to tell his experience there would have been several young ladies among those at the ball who did not lend the charm of their presence to that occasion.

influences which constantly seem to seek to attract young men of talent who follow the law as a profession. To him, being a legal adviser and his friend, Wright had talked freely and had rejoiced to learn that Morrison's ideals and hopes for Belmont were the same as his own. "Even if you hadn't asked me to watch things with you while you are still a stranger to Belmont," Morrison began, "I think I would have come to you. Last night while we were enjoying ourselves a bill was introduced in the council for a car line down Maple Avenue."

HAS A REAL NAME. It's Schimmelpenminck von der Ogle von Hoervelakin

Paris, May 19.—The Dutch chamber of deputies has just elected a new president. His name is Baron Schimmelpenminck von der Ogle von Hoervelakin, an awkward name, the newspapers comment, for use in cheering its owner.
