The Leviathan Vaterland Drifted

New York, May 22.-Navigation the North River, between lower New York and Hoboken, stood still yesterday while the Vaterland, biggest ship affoat, defied all efforts to dock her and swept broadside down the stream for more than mile.

Ferryboats and small craft scurried to safety as the leviathan floated broadside down the river with tugs e'reling frantically She floated a mile before the tugs got her straightened out and then she returned under her own steam.

Several trials to dock her failed, but by this time the fleet of tugs had been reinforced and they caught the liner and headed her back before she had gone far down the river.

Twice the Vaterland's great draught made her scrape the bottom and once it was reported that she was stuck in the mud. Secretary Bryan had a short interview with the president during Hendon, and started the flight the day, and a message of instruction later was sent to Justice Lamar and Mr. Lehmann. Nothing concerning its purport was disclosed here to-day.

Although no statement concerning the president's view of the situation was authorized, was indicated that he was well pleased with developments plain that he is determined that entire Mexican question must solved and that no half way measures of compromises will be acceptable to the administration.

Mr. Bryan late in the day had conference with John Lind and American representative of the stitutionalists.
