HER LITTLE SON WAS DYING
Gave Him "Fruit-a-tives" And Saved His Life.

CAMPBELLVILLE, Ont., May 5th, 1913.
"Ours little boy, Lawrence, was sorely affected with Chronic Indigestion, and the doctor did not think he would recover. He started with a sore mouth and it developed into this other trouble. Everything he ate just passed right through the system without change. He cried incessantly and life was a misery to him. My husband had been using "Fruit-a-tives" for indigestion, getting much benefit from them, and I thought what did him good, might help our boy. We tried "Fruit-a-tives" giving Lawrence 1/2 a tablet at a dose, and the result was marvellous. Today, he is the picture of health, and he is perfectly well".

The Daughter of David Kerr
By Harry King Tootle

(Copyright, 1914, by G. C. McGraw & Co.)
Little Ella looked at her in amazement. To Gloria a policeman was a stalwart individual with white gloves who halted traffic while she crossed the avenue. To the other a policeman was an enemy, a grafter who never overlooked an opportunity to feather his own nest or line his own pocket-book.

The best that she ever could say for any one of them was that he was an autocratic rowdy. Gloria's simplicity in asking if the police knew of this tribute caused her to reply:
"They ought to—they get some of it. Then the man higher up gets his."
"I can't believe it. When you get well I want you to come and tell my father all this. He is—he is an influential man. I'm sure he'll help you. He shall help you," she added emphatically, "and every poor, unhappy person down here, because I shall tell him to."

Little Ella looked at her, all admiration for such power.
"Geel! I wish I had a pa like yours," was all that she could say.
"Can't you know that such things are happening here—every day in Belmont?"

"If he did, I reckon he wouldn't tell you." Little Ella was more conversant with the ways of the world.
"And what did you say finally becomes of this money you have to pay?"

"The boss gets it."
"Oh, yes. This boss—who is he? What does he do to earn his money?"
"That's what he gets for protection us. He keeps the bulls from jugging us."

"And if you don't pay?"
"His gives 'em the tip 'n' we're hauled in, and sent up for thirty days."
This didn't accord with Gloria's idea of law and justice. Here was a man who, without authority and as his whim dictated, arrested people because they would not do something unlawful. And the police, instead of being instruments of the law, were under the direction of this boss.

"Can't the law touch him?" she asked.
"Huh! He's the law in this town."
"Do you mean to tell me there is a man so base," demanded the daughter of David Kerr indignantly, "this boss, that spends his time collecting this money?"

Little Ella had come to realize soon after they had met that she was dealing with a fledgling. Hence she bore with her and answered her question patiently.
"Gosh! Little time he spends collecting money down here." Her tone indicated clearly that he spent no time at all. "What's the cops fer? What's Mike Noonan fer? He's got other things to do himself. I once known a young lawyer, an' he tol' me the boss got his from the big gambler's houses, an' the street car company, an' the electric light company, an' big things like that."

"Then you're just a drop in the bucket." The magnitude of the "system" was just beginning to dawn on Gloria. She now saw that its ramifications were many, that there must be much that even this woman, for all her knowledge, could know little of. While she could not learn all from Little Ella, she could learn enough to make her father investigate.

"There's enough of us drops in Belmont to fill a pretty big bucket," the girl admitted. "Gimme a drink o' water, will you? I never was so dry at a Dutch picnic."

Gloria poured a glass of water for her. Then, feeling that she had not been considerate in asking the girl to tax her little strength by the recital of a story that sadly wasted her vital energy, she begged her to rest.

"You're still a bit feverish. Lie down now and rest. Try to go to sleep, and I'll sit here and read."

Soon her patient seemed to sleep, and Gloria picked up a book and tried to read. The revelations to which she had listened made all possibility of concentration upon the printed page out of the question. Suddenly it occurred to her that she did not know the boss' name. Just as this came into her mind, the girl turned restlessly and opened her eyes. Finding that she was awake, Gloria asked:
"Tell me, what's the name of the boss?"

"Eh? What?" Little Ella was not thoroughly awake.
"Who's the name of the boss? I want to tell father."

"His name? Oh, it's Kerr. He's o' Dave Kerr. Ever hear of him?"
Having roused herself sufficiently to answer the question, Little Ella sank again into a doze.

As for Gloria, it almost seemed that the words meant nothing to her at all. So slowly did her mind accept this intelligence that the fall of the book unnoticed to the floor did not seem related in point of time. Yet in fact it told that her mind was intent upon one question: Who was the boss of Belmont?

"Kerr! Kerr! Old Dave Kerr," will rang in her ears. "The boss? Dave Kerr? I wonder what relation—the very ignominy of the thought restrained her. "No, no, no. It's all a mistake. It can't be—I couldn't believe it. There can't be any relation of my father's—my fa— It's absurd. It would be maddening, the suspicion of such a thing. Why, my father's the

SALVATIONISTS SANG
TILL LAST 'MY COMRADES DIED LIKE HEROES'

"We're in God's Hands," Said Lost Father to Son Before the End
Montreal, June 1.—Standing with athletic ease, young Ensign Pugmire, of Toronto, calmly told the tale to his tearful friends who asked for the last tidings of their beloved Commissioner Rees when he arrived from Quebec. In describing his impressions more in detail, Ensign Pugmire said that there was no shock at the time of the collision.

"I heard a grating sound as if we were touching a rock," he said, "and as the sound continued I went up on deck, curious to see what was wrong. I never got back to my cabin. The lifebelts were all there. The ship was already listing over dangerously. It was all the work of a moment."

"Yes, there were a number of passengers on deck with me at the time, but when I looked over my shoulder as I grabbed the rail, I could see the gangways jammed with people. I passed Major Simcoe's berth going up and asked her if she was not coming. She told me to leave her and find out what the matter was. Her body was among the first picked up on shore."

"Shouting? None at all. Everything was orderly and quiet. No one had time to realize what was going on. We could not launch the boats because we could hardly stand up, so heavy did the list become. We had to take the side, and only the swimmers like myself are left of those who went over with me."

"I saw Commissioner Rees when he ran back to get his wife. Major Frank Morris tried hard to save him, for he carried him on his shoulders as long as he could. Morris was a hero."

"There was an explosion just as the ship went down, and that must have killed hundreds outright. The shock of it blew Morris right overboard. Morris' arm was badly scalded with the steam."

"We saw the ship heeling over to the right, but there was no outcry until she had disappeared. The swimmers then shouted to attract the lifeboat, that was already coming. My comrades died like Salvationists."

A further impression the civilian-lad ensign told was regarding the sudden listing.
"I believe the majority of the people on deck fell to the other side helplessly, and the boat rolled over them when sinking," he said.

The satisfaction of Bandsman Green of the Salvation Army in finding himself alive and without a scratch is a meagre one, clouded by the loss of his father, Adjutant Green, his mother and his sister Jessie.

No Great Blow Fell
"It was not a great blow we felt," he volunteered. "Just a little jar. You could not say that it was severe, not enough to throw you against the side of your bunk, for instance. But we guessed when the engines stopped and then began to go again fast, that something bad happened. I tell you that to get out was like climbing up a straight wall, the Empress listed to."

"And then, when she sank, I could think of nothing but a village suddenly flooded and all the people floating in the water. It was awful to see those faces bobbing up and down with the ship gone underneath and only water."

"But a wonderful thing happened. You know it is not light at that time in the morning and when we were thrown out it was quite dark. But all of a sudden it got light very quickly and we could see well. That was wonderful—the voice softened into reverence—'like Providence, as I don't believe it usually gets light as early."

"We're in God's Hands
When I last saw my father, he said, 'Well, boy, we are in God's hands,' and said, 'Yes, father.' In a second I was parted from all forever. They were all standing together, my father and my mother and my sister Jessie."

"I must say that all, or nearly all, the men behaved like men and all the women like women."

"Was there any panic?" he was asked.
"No," he replied. "It was surprising how little panic there was. They were all so gritty. You saw men and their wives being saved together, or standing to die together. Many did not part. And the Salvationists stood up and sang 'God be with you till we meet again,' as long as they could. I did see one man in the water try to push into a lifeboat ahead of a woman, but another struck him in the face and sent him back. I did hear, too, that there were other cases of this kind, but not many, and I didn't see them. The only real panic was among the foreigners. Most of the others were very calm."

General Booth's Message
London, June 1.—London Salvationists' quarters are stricken with grief. The shadow will rest on their great congress, opening Thursday. General Booth sends the following message to The Star: "My heart is full of grief in the great blow fallen on so many lives and homes, not alone in the Salvation Army, but outside the ranks. I have sent Commissioner Mackie on the Aquatania to cheer and help the mourners across the waters, for whom and for all the bereaved Mrs. Booth and I pray for the comfort of God."

AQUATANIA SAILS
Big Vessel Sets Out on Her Maiden Voyage
Liverpool, June 1.—Promptly at 2.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon the Cunard line steamer Aquatania, Great Britain's largest liner, started on her maiden voyage from this port to New York. The banks of the Mersey were thronged with cheering crowds and a great convoy of craft, with sirens shrieking, accompanied the leviathan down-stream.

BECKER FACES SCHMIDT
In the Death House at Sing-Sing, New York

Ossining, N.Y., June 1.—Charles E. Becker has passed for the second time into the death house at Sing Sing prison to await death in the electric chair for instigating the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

The prisoner's counsel will appeal, however, and this serves as a stay of execution. Many months will elapse before the court of appeals hands down its decision. In his former appeal, Becker won a second trial.

The prisoner was assigned to cell 17 in the second tier. The green screens in front of all the cell doors in the death house were drawn when he entered. When they were lifted Becker found that his cell faced that of Hans Schmidt, the discredited priest, who murdered Anna Amuliner in New York and then threw her dismembered body into the Hudson river.

Schmidt greeted Becker, but none of the seventeen other occupants of the death house spoke a word. As Warden Clancy left him Becker remarked:
"The death house doesn't look like the old place. It looks fine. The new coat of paint makes it look fine."

Mrs. Becker visited her husband yesterday and brought home a suitcase full of legal documents and books. Becker has begun work on his appeal.

Blind of Japan Well Cared For
From very ancient times the blind folk of Japan have received much attention, though they were never under the wards of the nation to the extent that obtained in the west under later Christian influence. The fact that blindness entitles a man to be raised to special rank may be taken as evidence of this care. It is recorded that about the year 886 A.D., when the Emperor Koko paid a visit to a certain place he was received by a company of blind men, whose condition much moved the compassion of his majesty. Not long after this the emperor gave orders that a row of tenements should be constructed in Kyoto, where the homeless blind might find shelter; and the blind were thenceforth ranked as a separate class, entitled to special privilege.—Japan Magazine.
