

REDISTRIBUTION BILL IS NOT AGREED UPON

And May Have To Stand Till Next Session

CASES OF INJUSTICE

RESPONSIBLE FOR A LACK OF AGREEMENT.

Liberals Fight Two Glaring Cases of Attempts to Wipe Out Constituencies Held by Them—May Have to Take Choice of Two Evils.

Ottawa, June 4.—The redistribution committee of the commons held what may be a final meeting last night. No agreement was reached in regard to a unanimous report, and if this decision is adhered to the government will willingly leave the bill over until next session, when a new draft will be made. It is freely predicted in government circles that with the pressure of an election at hand next session, there will be a much greater disposition to carry through a drastic gerrymander, and if there should be at that time a conservative majority in the senate the liberals may lack for small mercy at the hands of their opponents.

Were it not for two rather glaring instances of injustice in the bill, as now being insisted upon by the government majority on the committee, the liberal members on that committee would consent to a unanimous report on the grounds that as far as a compromise as could be expected under the circumstances had been granted. The two cases in dispute are the constituencies of Russell in Ontario and Richmond in Nova Scotia. These constituencies, now represented by Hon. Charles Murphy and George W. Kye, both liberal members, are to be wiped out, and the liberal members of the committee claim that a rank injustice is being done in these particular instances.

The choice seems to lie between the two evils of accepting the present bill, with the glaring injustices noted above, or risking an even more serious gerrymander by allowing the bill to go over until next year. It is possible that in view of what might happen next year the liberals may decide to accept the situation as presented the present time.

The majority of the conservative members seem to prefer holding the bill over until next session for another deal, when they hope to have everything their own way, both in the commons and in the senate. Unless there is a unanimous report from the committee, the government has intimated that it will not attempt to deal with the bill this session.

Stage Driver Broke Arm.

A painful accident befell George Clough, the Perth Road stage driver, on Wednesday evening, which resulted in the breaking of his left arm. Mr. Clough had been into the city in the afternoon and brought out a large load of freight. After arriving at Perth Road he was in the act of unloading when one of the packages rolled off and pinned him heavily against the side of his wagon. A bad fracture was inflicted. Mr. Clough, although his arm was broken, made a trip to the city on Thursday.

The liberals of North Norfolk nominated Lieut.-Col. T. B. Atkinson as candidate for the provincial legislature.

The redistribution bill was not agreed upon and may have to stand over till next session.

National Advertising

National advertising is only local advertising very much multiplied.

Goods are not sold to the Nation—But to the people in the Nation.

Each person is a unit and must be reached as such.

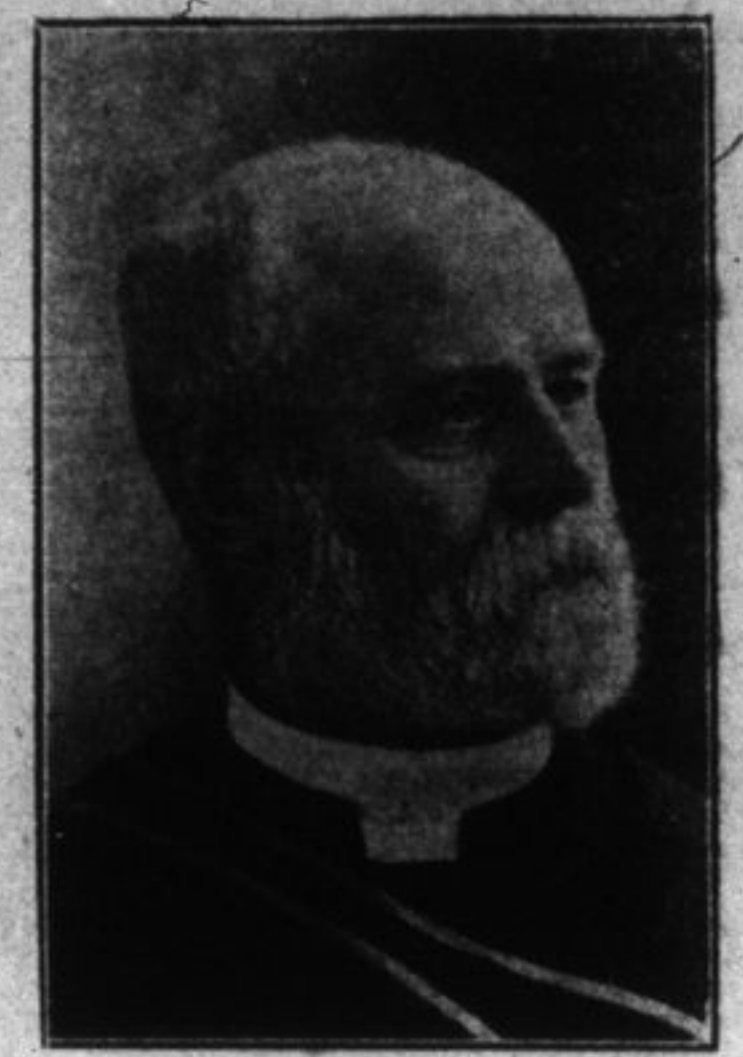

The greatest medium for reaching the people at the right moment is the daily newspaper.

Whatever other mediums advertisers may use—they must in the last analysis use the newspapers directly or indirectly.

Many wise National advertisers now use the daily newspapers in large volume, because through them they not only reach the people but also inspire confidence in the distributors of their goods.

Colden, Ont., June 4.—James Roache was found dead underneath a load of stone on the farm of John Rathwell, about three miles from here. It is presumed that the wagon had tied the lines to a stake on the wagon box and possibly tied them too tight, causing the horses to back up, and in trying to release them became entangled in them. The wagon turned over, burying Roache beneath the load, killing him instantly.

SAW IRVING'S EXIT FROM AMONG THE LIVING

The Stage Manager Of The London Theatre Relates An Extraordinary Dream

London, June 4.—Tatting, the stage manager of the Kingsway theatre, London, relates an extraordinary dream he had about the time of the Empress of Ireland disaster. In which he saw the exit of Laurence Irving from life. He dreamt he was present at a gathering of a number of people in a handsomely furnished room. The people passed in solemn procession before Sir Henry Irving, who was seated and had the appearance of a dying man. Each person took the actor by the hand in a sad farewell.

When all had passed Sir Henry uttered the words: "I can only do it no longer." He placed his hand on his forehead and disappeared, death having claimed him.

Tatting then, for the first time noticed Laurence standing alone at the far end of the room.

"I went towards him," said Tatting, "and, stretching out my hands appealingly, exclaimed: 'Can't you see what is happening to your father? He is dying. He has left us for ever.' He then looked past me with amazement in his eyes. It seemed for a moment as if he would collapse, but suddenly drawing himself up with a resolute expression on his face, he followed his father with unflinching steps.

"It was a most dramatic departure and made a deep impression on me. There was no sorrow or grief on the part of the son whose call to go seemed to come suddenly and unexpectedly."

Tatting afterwards saw a photograph of the saloon of the Empress of Ireland. He recognized it as the room of his dream. He had never seen the vessel nor was he aware that Laurence Irving was aboard the Empress of Ireland.

NOTE OF PESSIMISM AT NIAGARA FALLS

The Two Mexican Factions Must Agree Before There Can Be Peace

Niagara Falls, June 4.—There was a note of pessimism today among the observers of the negotiations as the result of the delay in the reply of General Carranza to the advances of Huerta through the mediators for the pacification of Mexico.

There can be no permanent peace between the United States and Mexico in the opinion of many, until the leaders of the two factions in Mexico itself have agreed on terms to prevent further bloodshed.

DID THIRD SHIP

Come Between The Empress And The Storstad?

A NAUTICAL AUTHORITY

SAYS IT WOULD EXPLAIN THE CHANGING LIGHTS.

Empress of Ireland's Ship Surgeon Indignant at Suggestion That Capt. Kendall Was Intoxicated — The Captain a Total Abstemious.

London, June 4.—The leading journals continue studiously to avoid comment on the conflicting statements of Captain Kendall and Captain Anderson, reading the inquiry, though both are fully reported. Especial satisfaction is expressed at the appointment of Lord Mersey, who, as the Times recalls, reduced to their true level, by his masterly judicial touch, the odious accusations, premature judgments, and grotesque exhibitions of ignorance and prejudice which broke out after the Titanic disaster, and which should be a restraint at the present time.

Some authorities discerned no essential conflict between Captain Kendall and Captain Anderson. There is a general attitude of desire to accept both statements as entirely honest.

The nautical correspondent of the Manchester Guardian asks whether it is not possible that a third ship was between the liner and the Storstad at one time during the critical period.

This would explain the Storstad officers' statement of the changing lights of the other steamer, and would also explain what otherwise appears, according to Captain Kendall's statement, inexplicable and is pointed—the double change of course by the Storstad.

Such a third ship, without wireless might have been within a mile of the collision and have known nothing about it in the fog.

Sir Hiram Maxim writes to the press to explain the fallacy of the idea that the boilers of the Empress of Ireland exploded after the collision. In that case the whole hull section would have been blown into fragments.

What exploded, he says, was the stokeholds, not the boilers, owing to the inflammable gases formed when red-hot grates and into the white-hot carbon.

Capt. Kendall an Abstemious.

Montreal, June 4.—Dr. J. Graft, the Empress of Ireland's ship surgeon, is incensed at the suggestion of the Storstad crew that Capt. Kendall was intoxicated when the collision occurred.

Dr. Grant, referring to the condition of Captain Kendall, said he could not walk, having apparently been injured in the back as well as internally, and he had to be assisted by two men. He, the doctor, tried as hard as he could to get him to take a little brandy, but he would not take it. He found afterwards that he was a life-long abstemious.

"I am absolutely certain that the captain had had very closely, and I examined him very closely, and I could not have failed to have smelled the liquor had he taken any. I took the captain and put him to bed in the captain's cabin on the Storstad. He was in a very weak condition and much alarmed me. I insisted that he should take some brandy and length succeeded in getting him to take a mouthful, but he had never taken any more, as he had never taken any in his life, and it certainly seemed to distress him a great deal. This happened in the presence of officer Fyfe, who is amongst the rescued."

Victims Funeral at Quebec.

Quebec, June 4.—All Quebec lined the streets of this ancient city this morning for the funeral of twelve victims of the Empress of Ireland, who were laid to rest. Few of those who stood by and watched the funeral pass knew the victims who were being carried to their graves, but the funeral meant more than the burial of twelve of the crew. The tolling bells, sobbing music, slow length of processions, the long line of survivors, the representatives of the government-general and all the high government and company officials were paying respect and honor to not only the twelve but also to the thousand others who perished in the great disaster. It was the funeral of the twelve and of others, who will rest in quiet old church yards far across the ocean, who will be peacefully laid away in every city and many towns from down where the tides of the Fundy roar up the narrow gulf to where the shadows of the Rockies fall. And also it was honoring the memory of those whose bodies rise and fall in the water-locked cabins, which float aimlessly up and down narrow white corridors and which rest on the floor of the St. Lawrence undisturbed by the ebb or the flow of the tide. It was the funeral of those who perished. It was the great tribute of a sorrowing city and opinion to those who did not survive.

Bluejackets carrying huge wreaths and crosses led the long line of hearse with their guards of honor. Then there followed one of the saddest figures of the entire procession—Capt. Kendall, his face, though solemn and stern, haggard and pale with grief, indicated the repressed expression of his emotions. With him was Capt. Walsh, marine superintendent of the C.P.R., personally representing Sir Thomas Shaughnessy.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ELECTS DR. HERRIDGE

As Moderator—The Ottawa Divine Was Proposed by Principal Gordon of Queen's

Woodstock, June 4.—The chief features of the Presbyterian General Assembly opening session last evening were the election of the moderator, Rev. Dr. W. T. Herridge of Ottawa, and the valedictory address by the retiring moderator, Rev. Dr. Murdoch Mackenzie.

Knox church was well filled, some three hundred commissioners from various parts of the dominion being present, the rest of the congregation being made up of citizens of Woodstock, and a large number of farmers from the surrounding country.

Dr. Mackenzie, a redoubtable missionary, who has served twenty-five years among the Chinese people, was in his richest mood. He stood in the pulpit and spoke of his life-work like Ulysses standing in the courts of rulers telling of his exploits on sea and land.

Principal Gordon, of Queen's university, rose immediately after the close of the opening service, and after referring to the splendid service rendered by the retiring moderator, said it was his great pleasure to nominate Rev. Dr. Herridge of Ottawa as the moderator for the coming year. Dr. Herridge has served as pastor of St. Andrew's church for thirty-two years, and he was one of the most eloquent and forceful preachers in the dominion. The motion was seconded by Principal Mackay of Vancouver.

The names of Principal Scribner of Montreal, Dr. John Neil of Toronto, and Rev. Duncan D. MacLeod of Barrie were proposed. A standing vote was taken, and the final vote between Dr. Herridge and Principal Scribner resulted in an overwhelming vote for Dr. Herridge.

WOMAN WAS POISONED; BROTHER BOUGHT ACID

Expired Soon After Taking A Drink Of Gin—Mysterious Features

Richmond, Que., June 4.—Richmond is in a state of excitement over the death of Mrs. J. P. Viger, of this place, which occurred on Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Viger succumbed after taking a drink of gin from a bottle.

Dr. Johnson and Tomkins, who made the autopsy, state that the woman died as a result of poisoning from carbolic acid.

Coroner Bachand, of Sherbrooke, opened an inquest, last night, and after hearing one or two witnesses adjourned until Thursday evening.

It was brought out in the evidence that Narcisse Petignat, brother of the deceased, had purchased twenty-five cents' worth of carbolic acid at Bedard's drug store on Saturday evening.

When questioned on this point he admitted purchasing the acid, but stated that he used it for medicinal purposes and threw away what was left.

There is a strong feeling that further investigation will bring out some sensational evidence, and that it will be proven that Mrs. Viger was not the one for whom the poison was intended, and it is possible that other members of the family may be called upon for further explanation.

Montreal, June 4.—The Canadian Pacific Railway company to-day served agents for Lloyds, underwriters, formal notice of abandonment of the SS. Empress of Ireland. This makes it certain that the company have given up hope of the sunken ship with its eight hundred human bodies entombed therein, but it is believed that the underwriters will make a determined attempt to raise the vessel. NOTED CUBANS JAILED; FEAR UPRISINGS

Will Resist Any Attempt to Free Men Imprisoned For Killing General

Havana, June 3.—General Ernesto Asbert, ex-governor of Havana province, and Eugenio Arias, a former member of the House of Representatives, were sentenced by the supreme court to twelve years' imprisonment for the killing, in July, 1913, of General Armando Riva, chief of the national police.

Senator Vidal Morales, who was with Asbert and Arias at the time of the killing, was convicted on two charges, the first, firing a shot in the street, and the second, carrying a revolver without a license. A fine was imposed.

Police Constable Emilio Campino, whom the defendants accused of attempting to shoot them, was acquitted.

There was no disturbance after the verdict was rendered. In view of possible risings, however, machine guns had been placed near the jail and police guards were doubled.

The shooting of General Riva occurred the evening of July 7th, 1913, in the most crowded portion of the Prado. General Riva had stopped his carriage in front of the Asbert Club and had caused the arrest of the doorkeeper.

Asbert, Morales and Arias arrived in an automobile about the same time and a heated dispute arose, followed by many shots.

The chief of police fell badly wounded and was removed to a hospital, where he was shot by a man, who had been shot by Governor Asbert and Representative Arias. He died two days later.

The Presbyterian general assembly meeting at Woodstock elected Rev. Dr. W. T. Herridge, of Ottawa, as moderator.

SIR WILLIAM OSLER Has been elected foreign associate of the French Academy of Medicine.

REFUSED TO PAY FARE.

Court Decides He Was Not a Disorderly Person.

Trenton, N.J., June 4.—A passenger, or rather a strap-hanger, who refused to pay a fare on a railroad train unless provided with a seat, is not a disorderly person within the meaning of the act of 1911, according to an opinion filed in the supreme court by Justice Swayne setting aside the conviction of Calvin Burns.

Burns boarded a crowded car of the Atlantic City and Shore railroad at Pleasantville. He refused to pay his fare on the ground that he had no seat.
