Bath Road Budget.
Bath Road, June 6.—The farmers who are through seeding and now doing their planting were pleased to see the rain on Thursday. A little girl has come to brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Keyes. Miss Jones, teacher of the Bath Road school, is preparing four pupils for the entrance examinations. Misses Veda Polk and Mildred Redmond, also Douglas Bushell, who have been attending the Kingston Collegiate Institute have been promoted to second form without having to try the entrance examinations. Mr. Vanorder is beautifying his home with a fresh coat of paint. Mr. Abbott is building a new hen house.

Westport Concert.
Westport, June 8.—The Westport Women's Institute gave an elaborate concert in the town hall last Thursday and Friday evenings. Besides a first-class musical programme, the event of the evening was an interpretation of an old-time institute meeting at Me-hawk cross roads. The ladies who took part were appropriately costumed to represent the era in which the event took place and the acting was excellent. The proceeds were far above anticipation, there being a goodly attendance both evenings.

Dr. and Mrs. Lorne Yule, of Logansport, Indiana, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Breakenridge. Mrs. T. J. McLennan was a visitor in Ottawa. Mrs. E. Taylor and the Misses Ina and Mildred Taylor, of Deseronto, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Ewing. R. W. McDonald is spending a few days of this week at home.

Maberly Has Worms.
Maberly, June 6.—The worms are very destructive on the gardens. The meadows are looking fine. A meeting will be held on Wednesday evening to appoint a delegate to go to Smith's Falls to the convention. The Women's Institute will meet on Wednesday evening when Miss Speers will be the special speaker. The members of the Ladies Aid presented Rev. Mr. Hollingsworth and Mrs. Hollingsworth with two splendid leather chairs. Mr. Hollingsworth will shortly leave Maberly and go to some other mission. The people are sorry to lose them. Mr. Norman Buchanan and family have arrived to spend some time with friends in Maberly and Parham. Thomas Briggs has purchased a new automobile. Mr. Brown, of Kingston, was in the village on Friday. Mr. John Palmer spent Sunday at home.

THE SAVING OF BOBBIE

Robert Livingston was desperately in love with pretty Hulda Roberts. The one cloud on his horizon was Carlton Carruthers. There he was even now, dangling over the side of the piano at which Hulda was playing softly. Suddenly Robert walked over to the piano.

"Hulda, do you think it would be a fine stunt to go for a short walk after that heavy dinner?" he suggested, absolutely ignoring the presence of Carruthers.

"Hardly in this togery," Hulda laughed in reply.

"What have you against Miss Roberts, old man?" interrupted Carruthers, "that you should invite her for a stroll in the snow clad in a decollete gown and paper sole slippers?"

"I wanted to speak to Hulda, a moment, and I knew you detested the cold, so I suggested going out of doors to get rid of you."

He was irresistible, and all three of them laughed.

"Livingston," said Carruthers, "I'll make a bargain with you. I'll go up in the library and smoke just one hour, then I'll come back and claim Miss Roberts, and you to go to the library for an hour. What say you?"

Carruthers was gone, and there was nothing for Hulda to do but stay with Livingston.

Hulda felt something brush by her skirts and, leaning over, saw her favorite Angora cat purring at her side. Tenderly she picked the animal up in her arms.

"Bobby, dear," she cooed to it. "Did I understand you aright?"

"I was speaking to the cat," repeated Hulda. "His name is Robinson Crusoe, but we call him Bobbie for short."

"You will forgive me, Hulda, won't you? But you must remember that my name is Bobbie. And Hulda," he continued as he leaned a little closer to her, "do you think you could ever come to think of me as Bobbie dear?"

"Why, Mr. Livingston?" began Hulda.

"Could you ever care for me as much as for—"

"You have no right to drag Mr. Carruthers into this," interrupted Hulda. "He is nothing to me."

"I was not thinking of Carruthers. I meant could you ever care as much for me as for Robinson Crusoe? Do you think?"

"I think we are sitting too near the fire and that it is high time that Bobbie was in bed like all other decent cats," answered Hulda.

"Please take him and give him to the maid, would you? And you need not hurry back," she added. Before Livingston could remonstrate the huge gray ball of fur was thrust into his arms.

Hulda then curled up again in the corner of the settle.

Just then Carruthers appeared on the stairs.

"Oh, there you are!" he cried as he discovered her alone. "So livingston deserted you before the hour was up. My, my, but you must have made it disagreeable for him. May I sit upon the vacant throne?" he asked as he seated himself at the other end of the bench.

For an hour or more Carruthers and Hulda talked in a low tone and were utterly oblivious that other inhabitants lived on the globe.

Suddenly the door leading to the back of the house was thrust open, and the maidservants came dashing through in wild disorder, yelling: "Fire!"

"Oh, my Bobbie! My dear, dear Bobbie! Save him, someone!" cried Hulda.

Carruthers looked at the girl once more to make sure the cry came from her. There was no mistake. She wanted Livingston.

"Where is he?" demanded Carruthers huskily.

"Oh, he's in the kitchen! Save him, hurry back, my sakes!"

Carruthers waited for no more. His heart was too full, his brain whirling. Past the frightened women, down the long corridor that led to the kitchen, brushing maids aside, he strode to save his rival, Bobbie Livingston.

As he reached the kitchen he found the men had put out the slight conflagration and that it amounted to nothing. But Livingston was not in sight. Carruthers went back to Hulda.

"Where's Bobbie?" she asked with great concern.

"He's gone!" began Carruthers.

"My dear, dear Bobbie!" wailed Hulda; not allowing him to finish his sentence. Then something brushed her skirt again, and, with a scream of delight, she picked up the cat.

"You told me he was gone," she said reproachfully to Carruthers as she hugged the fluffy ball to her bosom.

"Is that the Bobby you sent me for?" gasped Carruthers.

"Of course it is," Hulda answered rather sharply. "Whom did you think I sent you for?"

"Why, Bobbie Livingston," weakly replied Carruthers as he mopped the perspiration from his brow.

Hulda hugged the cat for just a minute as she smiled. Then suddenly she turned serious and put him on the floor.

"I love you better than I did before the fire, if that could possibly be," whispered Hulda. And once more the earth was inhabited by two persons only—Kathleen O'Brien in the Poughkeepsie News.

Berlin Residents Thirsty.
London Tit-Bits.

A census of the church-goers of Berlin having given most unfavorable results, other inquiring minds have attempted a census of the public house or tavern-visiting population of the city. The figures are certainly more encouraging. Although the census was taken at the dulllest time of the evening, between 5.30 and 8.30, it was found that during these three hours ninety-eight drinking places were visited by 22,426 persons.

It must not be supposed that there are only ninety-eight drinking places in Berlin. On the contrary a single street, the Blumenstrasse, which contains only eighty-four houses, has forty saloons and an inn, and there is actually a street in Berlin, the Madistraass, which with only fifteen houses, has seventeen saloons and three hotels.

There is very little drunkenness to be seen on the streets of Berlin, and one must stay up late to see that, but that is not because the thing is not abundant, but because the police will not tolerate any kind of disorder in public.
