ANCIENT HOTELS IN ROME. Prominent Inns Were Located Near Entrances to the Coliseum.

Toronto Star. The traveller who is prone to complain of sleepless nights spent in uncomfortable hotels in this country may find some solace in this account of the Roman hotels in the days of the late republic and empire. The most interesting hostelries were near the circuses and amphitheatres.

The shrewd and generally dishonest owners had a double purpose in selecting that situation. It was well chosen for the patronage of the huge crowds that went to the circuses on holidays to see the fights between wild animals.

A large number of the hostelries displayed upon the ceilings of their common rooms a painting representing a rooster. The painting bore an inscription, the spirit of which will never grow old. "When this cock crows, then will we give you credit." This is the one link that binds the crude, uncomfortable tavern of ancient Rome to the elaborate hotel of the present day.

The Same Thing. Secretary Garrison, apropos of his bill for creating six vice-admirals, said at a luncheon in Washington.

"This bill will make things better from a diplomatic standpoint, though the actual working of the navy will remain the same. Yes, the navy itself will be like Brown."

"Brown, idle through slack times, started to tramp to Buffalo by way of the Erie canal to look for a job."

"He met on his way a good many canal boats coming up and down, and finally, stopping a canal boat captain, he offered to work his passage."

"The captain took him on, and set him to lead the horses along the towpath."

"He led the horses for two days, thinking hard. On the third day he thought it all out, and he resigned."

"By the powers," he said, "I might as well walk as work my passage."

Mere Minnows. "Did you catch any fish this morning?"

"No" (scoffingly).

"Well, you are truthful, anyway, which can't be said of all fishermen."

"As to that, perhaps you might have called them fish, but I wouldn't."

ATKINSON-DAINTY

Wedding Ceremony Performed in St. James' Church.

On Wednesday morning, at 10:30 o'clock a quiet wedding was solemnized in St. James' church, when Miss Elsie Mabel Dainty, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dainty, Gore street, was united in marriage to Richard Thomas A. Atkinson, of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. W. Savary rector of St. James' church.

Miss Nellie Dainty, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Frederick Johnston was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson left on the noon train for Toronto and Niagara Falls after which will return to the city to take up residence. Many beautiful gifts were received, showing the high esteem in which the couple are held by their many friends.

A Bridgroom Entertained.

A pleasant event took place on Tuesday evening, at the home of William Jackson, William street west, when Frank L. Newman entertained the members of St. James' Club in honor of Richard T. Atkinson, who was married Wednesday. The first part of the evening was spent in progressive euchre, J. H. Rutherford winning first prize, Vernon C. Green second and the guest of the evening the consolation prize.

A dainty luncheon was served at midnight. The table decorations were in club colors, purple and yellow, American lilies and lily of the valley. The favors were Persian ivory pen-nives.

On behalf of the club, Richard Partidge read an address and presented Mr. Atkinson with a round quartered oak dining-room table. On behalf of six pals, Frank L. Newman read an address and presented him with a set of leather dining-room chairs. Mr. Atkinson, in a few well-chosen words, thanked the donors for their kindness.

Divorce Teamwork.

A woman, weighing two hundred pounds and as strong as a female "whit" horse, came before a Kansas lawyer with her husky, one-hundred-and-thirty-pound husband and said they desired to get a divorce.

"On what grounds?" asked the lawyer.

"Extreme cruelty," said the woman.

"But," said the lawyer, "that is absurd. How you are big and heavy, and you say this little, weak man has been tyrannical and cruel to you. You must do better than that. You could turn him over your knee and spank him and not half try."

"That's all right, Mister Lawyer," broke in her husband. "I agreed to let her have an extra thousand dollars in alimony if she would put that in about me being cruel. You see, I want to send the petition back to my folks in Ohio. When they read it they'll think I have spunked up to beat the band since I came west."—Kansas City Star.
