

HOURLY HAS ARRIVED

FOR THOSE WISHING TO ABLISH THE BAR ROOMS.

For Many Years Good Men Have Been Writing, Talking and Praying About Desirability of Greater Restriction Placed on the Liquor Traffic.

The Canadian Baptists. For many years good men among us have been writing and talking about the desirability, aye, the necessity, of vastly greater restriction being placed on the liquor traffic, and though at times it has seemed as though the writing and talking has been in vain, it is evident that it has not been in vain, for in these days in Ontario, we are face to face with an issue as we have never before faced with the hope of curtailing that traffic that has nothing in its favor and everything to its discredit.

The many who have written and spoken in the interests of temperance and who have longed for the day when the bar and club licenses would be abolished, have been supported by praying bands of men and women, who have cried day and night unto God that deliverance might come. These will keep on praying, sometimes fearful, sometimes hopeful, but always pleading for the removal of that which has slain thousands of the brightest and best of our citizens, and which, if permitted to remain, will slay thousands more of the present and coming generations.

Between now and June 29th, it is a great gratification to think thousands of men and women will frequently and at length be on their knees before God, praying for victory for the temperance cause. And we would encourage all those who have learned to pray not to desist but to make their requests known unto God in this matter.

But one thing, above and beyond all the writing and talking and praying, we would urge, that those who have the privilege of casting ballots do so in a way that will count for the abolition of the bar and club licenses. Writing, and talking and praying will have their place until the end of the contest, but that cannot take the place of voting. And voting has been placed in the hands of men who are to determine the issue. However much has been, and will be, done in the way of speech and prayer, the thing which will decide the issue is in the power of the men who are to cast the ballots. Hence, with all earnestness and modesty, we beseech every voter who reads our columns not only to speak and pray for the success of the Rowell policy, but also to mark his ballot in its favor. This may be asking a liberal to cast his ballot for a conservative; it may be asking a conservative to cast his ballot for a liberal. Be it so; the hour has struck when men who care for the best moral interests of society, who confess that the liquor traffic is Christianity's greatest menace, who know that the bar room is the tap root of the drinking custom, if need be, should break away from traditional party lines and vote as they have talked and prayed.

SOME RIGHTS LOST.

In the Compensation Act Not Yet Promulgated.

It should be borne in mind that the new act takes away from the working man his rights at common law. It also takes away from him his rights under the existing Workmen's Compensation Act, under both of which, if a claim were established, he was entitled to full compensation for the injury sustained.

In considering the position of the working men in our act, comparing it with the British act, it should not be overlooked that under the British act both of these rights are preserved to the working men. These are valuable rights which the working men have been compelled by the report of the commissioner and the action of the government to surrender in consideration of the benefits conferred by the new act as above set forth.

May we not confidently hope that the introduction of this measure though capable of great improvements will help do for Ontario what social and industrial insurance have done for Germany. You will be interested to hear the opinion of a man who speaks with authority on the question. Dr. Kaufman, president of the German imperial insurance office states:

"The workers' lives preserved mean the maintenance and increase of our natural resources, and therefore give splendid returns for the heavy financial burdens which social insurance places upon economic structure. It is not an accident that the unprecedented expansion of German commerce and industry and the wonderful improvement in the economic welfare of the nation during the last twenty years have happened concurrently with thorough-going improvement in the condition of our workers. There is a close connection between the two events."

Tidings From Wilton.

Wilton, June 19.—This community has been threatened with frosts of late, and it would mean a serious loss to the farmers, as early potatoes and corn are making great progress. The strawberry season is now opening and promises to be a good yield if the weather man sends moisture. The new cement walks recently placed on the streets are giving good satisfaction.

The home of Frederic Reid has been graced with a ten-and-a-half-pound baby boy. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Perry returned home, to-day, from their honeymoon. A reception is being held at the home of Mrs. Perry to-night. The candidates for the Wilton entrance pupils are writing at Odessa. The new meeting held on the church campus, on Tuesday night, was a decided success. The maypole dance given by twelve of the young damsels was a beautiful feature. The Odessa band furnished ample music. "Comer" events cast their shadows before them, and we are told that another wedding in the near future is looming. Scouts Moore, Aylesworth and Sampson, of Newburgh, spent last Sunday at M. G. Storms'. Several boys are preparing for camp at Barrield in July. Mrs. Walton Davey leaves, next Tuesday, for Alberta, to join her husband for three months. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nills, of Winnipeg, are with James Lewis for a few days. J. E. Miller has the cement work of his site completed. Archibald Stover suffered a bad spell last Saturday, but is somewhat better. Miss Mary Crawford is recovering from her operation.

You can get the latest popular music, 2 sheets 25c., Dutton's, opposite Opera House.

A Mother's Plea

To the Editor of the Toronto Globe: May I address a few lines to the men, the voters, of Toronto and of the province? I am a widow, the mother of six boys, the eldest sixteen years old. The open bar had an irresistible temptation to the father of those boys. Struggle, strive, promise as he would, the open bar drew him in. Liquor even as a medicine was never in our house. The open bar for almost eighteen years caused distress and agony to us which no word-painter could possibly depict.

Gentlemen, I have a home, I have six sons, I have no vote. The open bar robbed me of a husband, robbed my boys of a father at the time when they needed a father most. Is it any wonder that I make bold enough to come forward and seek the men, the Christian men, the conservative men, to come out on June 29th and vote "abolish the bar"? If men like the Hon. Mr. Crawford had lived the agony of my life, is it possible that they would work and vote for a party that would tolerate the liquor traffic? I say not, no, they could not. Would it be possible for men, Christian men, had they lived the agony of my life, to come out and declare: "I am an Orangeman first, a conservative second and a temperance man third"? Ah, I say no, no, it would not be possible. Temperance would come first. Would any man who is a conservative stay at home and refuse to vote against his party on June 29th if he had lived my life? No, he would come out and vote "abolish the bar," even though it were against his party. Men, voters of this city and province, come out and vote "abolish the bar," and save my six boys, and save thousands of other boys just like mine.

—One Tired in the Fery Furnace of the Open Bar.

Made Bible for the Blind. One of the many blind workers whom the king and queen will see at work when they open the new premises of the National Institute for the Blind next Thursday is John Andrew Ford. He is 61 years of age and has the distinction of having hammered out the first English Bible in Braille. This work was performed by hand and occupied 2 1/2 years.

Mr. Ford in early life was a printer's compositor in London, and when in 1875 he lost his sight he learned the Braille system of reading and writing. Since 1877 he has been employed by the National Institute for the Blind, and it was on behalf of the institute that the first Braille Bible was produced.

Mr. Ford did all the punching work himself under the direction of the late Dr. T. R. Armitage, the founder of the institute. The task involved no fewer than 200,000,000 blows the punch having to be struck three times with the hammer for each dot. This Braille edition of the Bible runs into forty-nine bulky foolscap columns.—London Mail.

ANTI-TREATING PLAN

GOVERNMENT NOT COURAGE TO GIVE IT BURIAL.

Forced to Do Something Along Temperance Lines and Then Forsook Its Offspring—What Conservative Whip Says. Toronto Globe. C. R. McKeown, conservative nominee in Dufferin, has disclosed some of the inner secrets of the Tory caucus. At a recent meeting he stated that if it had not been for such men as himself, Sam Charters and Hon. Thomas Crawford, there would have been no temperance legislation by the Whitney government. It was only because of the persistent agitation in caucus that the government was forced to do anything at all. He told caucus that they must "jockey" with the temperance people, although he believed they would not be satisfied with anything short of total prohibition in Ontario.

So far as anti-treating was concerned, Mr. McKeown ventured the admission that it was brought forward because the conservative party was frightened and felt that the time had arrived when something should be done. Since anti-treating legislation had been proposed the government had found that difficulties in the way of information would nullify the good effects of any such law and had therefore decided to abandon it.

This statement from the assistant whip of the conservative party in the legislature is not without its significance, and seems to prove the accuracy of Mr. Rowell's contention that anti-treating was born to die prematurely, and the government has not had the courage to give it a decent burial.

BI-LINGUAL DISPUTE. Ontario Supreme Court Soon to Deal With Suit. Ottawa, June 20.—The famous case of MacKell vs. The Roman Catholic Separate school trustees of Ottawa will come up at the Ontario Supreme court sittings to be held here next week. It has been transferred from Toronto. This case is the crux of the whole vexed bi-lingual situation in the province and its outcome is being awaited with much interest.

If decided in favor of the plaintiff, it will be in the hands of the French and English coalition in the local school board, which is the factor responsible for practically the whole bi-lingual agitation in the province. The case arises out of an injunction taken out by Trustee MacKell of the school board to prevent that body from issuing debentures for new schools and carrying on their business while active in defiance of the law, as it is claimed, they have been doing for some time. The French trustees threatened on the other hand, that they will retaliate by making every separate school under their purview bi-lingual and by housing French and English children together to the detriment of both.

The situation at present is bad enough as a number of the local teachers have not been paid their salaries in view of the unsettled condition of things. A breach has developed between the English and French, which many think will never heal and that this is being generally recognized is indicated by the fact that in the Sacred Heart church (French) prayers have been offered that an amicable settlement of the situation may be reached.

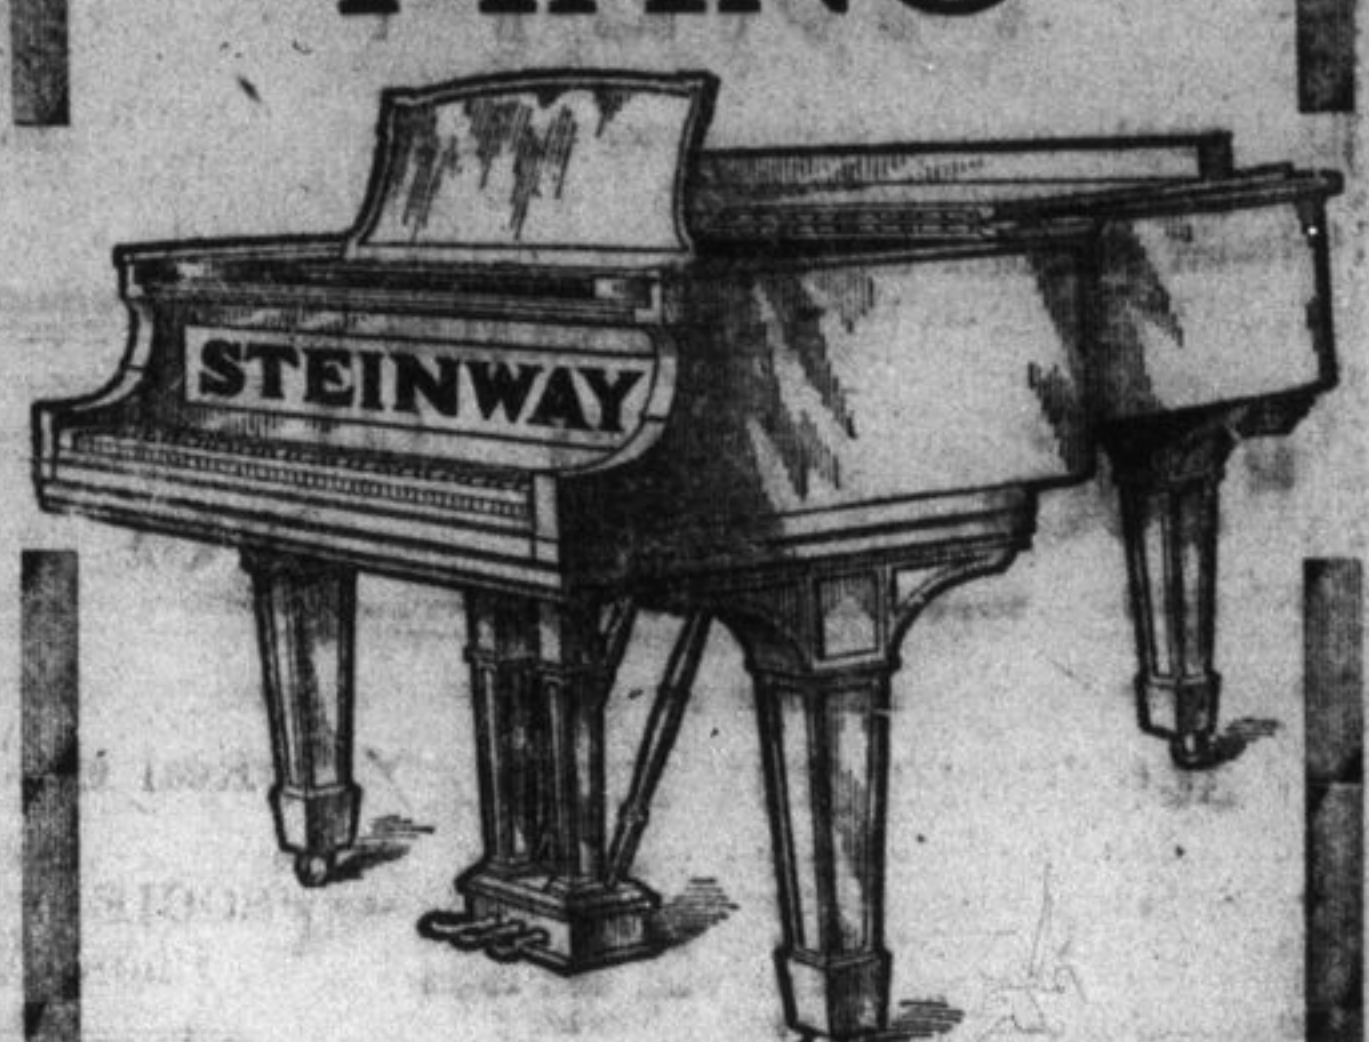

The near approach of the Ontario elections, in which the bi-lingual school question will be a big issue, has raised feeling to fever heat. Napoleon, Champagne, East Ottawa, French conservative, M.L.A., has issued a statement in which he says he is prepared to repudiate the Whitney bi-lingual policy and it is probable that his example will be followed by every French-Canadian candidate in an Ontario riding who hopes for the votes of his compatriots.

First Piano Made by an Italian. The piano, which is coming to the rescue of music hall managers whose orchestras are on strike, is one of the few common objects about whose invention no doubt exists. For it is agreed that the first piano was made by an Italian Christopher in 1709, the problem of fitting a harpsichord with hammers having until then avoided solution. The first piano that came to England was made by an English monk at Rome, and, although its touch and mechanism were so imperfect that nothing quick could be executed upon it, in a slow movement like the "Dead March," it excited wonder and delight. That would not have been much good to the pathetic comedian.—London Chronicle.

Idea Good, Execution Short. Hartford Courant. —Abie Williams, a native of Rhode Island, is reputed to have always craved originality, and when his wife died recently he adhered to his principles and had an original epitaph inscribed on her headstone. "Lord She Was Thine," was the idea he hit upon. He had his own ideas of space between words and the size of the letters, and gave instructions to the stonemason. The latter carried them out all right, except that he could not get the "e" in Thine.

LABOR INTERESTS NEGLECTED

Severe Arraignment of the Whitney Government by the Industrial Banner, Mouthpiece of Organized Labor.

One who has kept tab on the present session of the Ontario legislature can come to no other conclusion than that as a truly progressive body it is clearly very far behind the times. While both European and American legislatures have been adopting measures that provide for equal suffrage and the removal of sex restrictions on the exercise of the franchise, the Ontario legislature has gone again on record as being opposed to giving married women with property the right to vote in municipal elections. In this respect it is clearly away behind the city of Toronto and other progressive municipalities who have pronounced in its favor. Why such should be the case it is hard to understand. For the good name of the province one might well have hoped they would have been less unprogressive.

In regard to the question of tax reform the legislators in the Queen's Park are equally backward in running counter to the popular will of the more progressive municipalities which have repeatedly urged action along these lines. Even Allan Studholme, the one labor representative in the house, when talking on a subject of vital importance to the workers of the province, was found to be speaking to less than a quorum, and a hurry call had to go out to secure enough stragglers to prevent the adjournment of the legislature.

It is high time that the electorate was waking up and taking note of the doings of their so-called representatives in the Queen's Park. It is hardly to the credit of the people of Ontario that they are satisfied with a governing body that does not measure up in intelligence to the standard of many a European principality. It is a funny proposition that the voters in Toronto and other municipalities will repeatedly carry measures by large majorities, that they believe to be in the best interests of the community at large, only to have their verdict coolly ignored when they ask for legislation at the bar of the house to give it due effect.

One may well surmise which of the two is really the least progressive after all, the politicians who are so far behind public sentiment, or the ultimate voter who is always ready to send them back, when he has a chance to elect better representatives if he only knew enough to do so. If things progress as they are doing much longer, that old hospital, the dominion senate, will yet lead the Ontario legislature by a few laps.—Industrial Banner.

Vote for Harrison and Rowell's Progressive policies. Meat Values of Flour. White bread was said by experts, or by those who claim to be experts, to be much superior to brown bread a few months ago, and we were told that the idea of eating Graham bread or any bread containing part or all of the bran of wheat and other portions of the grain which were taken out in the bolting process was old fashioned and might lead to injury. Now comes the medical inspectors of the French army, a group of very distinguished physicians and scientists, who say that bolting pushed beyond a certain limit eliminates the useful element of flour in more than one respect and does nothing but improve the color of the bread. When white bread is used exclusively they have found that the men eat and need more meat, but when the flour is only partially bolted and only the coarser particles of the bran are removed the soldiers are in better health and they eat less meat, which results in superior economy and efficiency at the same time. The method of bolting flour was invented some centuries ago and it seems a very long time that the relative values of white and unbolted flour were settled, but the doctors can no more agree about it than they can about the therapeutic value of alcohol.—New York Commercial.
