THE 14TH AT PETAWAWA

THE KINGSTON REGIMENT IS 240 STRONG.

It Took an R. C. H. A. Deserter to Camp Under Arrest—Camp Life Did Not Appeal to the Belleville Regiment.

The Whig's correspondent at Petawawa writes: Numbering 240, the 14th regiment is in the van of all other city corps in this district training at Petawawa. The Kingston regiment excels Belleville and Brockville numerically and, subsequently, in its capability to discharge its duty. The 14th, which left on Sunday morning for Petawawa, was delayed at the G.T.R. junction waiting for the train from Belleville with the 15th regiment. It had been held up at Ernestown on account of a hot box.

The Belleville volunteers apparently did not view with the same degree of anticipation Petawawa camp as the local riflemen. The 14th did not "fall over themselves" for the manoeuvres. But two officers and less than 50 men joined the 14th and proceeded to Brockville where the 41st was picked up and the three corps, changing to the C. P. R., arrived at Petawawa before seven o'clock. The 41st, with a four company regiment, turned out about eight strong for Petawawa. The 14th took 192 to camp on Sunday, and was preceded by an advance party of over 40 on Saturday. This is the first experience of most of the Kingston riflemen at Petawawa. It is a very extensive camp ground, the different units being located for miles around. The line of the 14th are about a mile from the station next to those of the 57th of Peterboro. The Montreal and Toronto (48th) highland regiments are well represented.

Sunday was a beautiful day, and large parades for drum-head services were held. Those with the advance detachment of the 14th, who worked hard on Sunday in preparation for the arrival of the battalion in the evening, had "some" tales to tell of their first night's experience. The party did not arrive until after dark and put in a very cold night.

A deserter from the R.C.H.A., who surrendered himself in Kingston, was taken to Petawawa by the 14th and delivered to the artillery. Co-Sergt. W. Hall, "G" company, is the acting sergeant-major. "G" company is the most largely represented.

Monday was spent for the 14th in the vicinity of the camp, where battalion work was engaged in.

The general idea of the manoeuvres, which the thousands of troops have been engaged in Monday and Tuesday and will conclude Wednesday is: The Ottawa river is the frontier between two powers—Whiteland, represented by Quebec, and Brownland, represented by Ontario, between which a state of war exists. Owing to various reasons it is known in both armies that Whiteland is likely to assume the offensive. In consequence Brownland, being uncertain where the frontier will be forced, watches the river line with mounted troops and keeps his main force concentrated ready to strike the Whiteland army at the earliest possible moment.

On Tuesday morning the 14th left camp at an early hour for the manoeuvres and bivouacked some miles away, returning on Wednesday.

Major H. J. Dawson and the officers are well pleased with the turnout for Petawawa and the trip to Watertown, N.Y., for July in the next event. The regiment will return from camp on Thursday morning.

"Canada, the Western Cities; Their Borrowings and Their Assets," by Henry Howard, is a book that deals concisely and definitively with the present conditions of the western cities of Canada, giving full details as to their loans and assets. It shows what remarkable progress has been made of recent years, and the general stability which has been attained in a short space of time. It is published by the Investors' Guardian, Limited, London.

The People's Decision.

Abolish the bar is a slogan which is but a reflex of the people's determination. They have decided that the hotel of the future must be a hotel which will not serve spirituous liquors. This is their right. What the people determine to have is likely to be what is best for them. If the "bar" is likely to go it will probably be found that the "bar" deserved punishment.

MOTOR BOAT OWNERS

Awaiting Some One to Form a Club in Kingston.

A short while ago the Whig had an article in connection with a proposed motor boat club. The enthusiasm still lingers among the owners of this craft, but as yet no one has come forward to call a meeting that the scheme may be inaugurated.

Each year additional motor boats are to be seen. But alas! Some who take upon themselves to sail in waters with their new boats, thinking that they know where to escape the stumps, etc., are brought to grief by either having the propeller hanger broken or by bending their shaft and wheel. Just a few days ago this happened to a fine new boat and the owner will remember where one obstruction is. He may possibly take another such errand and see if he can discover any more. This is how many an owner of this craft has found out the right and the wrong course to take.

The formation of a motor boat club would be the remedy. One of the committees constituting this club could be placed in charge of marking out bad and treacherous spots.

BISHOP FARTHING'S VIEW.

According to Bishop Farthing, of Montreal, who spent several years in Kingston as dean of Ontario, "drunkenness is in proportion to the facilities offered for drink." For that reason he fought for the reduction of bars in Kingston. If drunkenness is in proportion to the facilities for drink, the abolition of the bar will greatly lessen drunkenness.

The steamer Frontier is on the list for the dry dock.

Labor and the Whitneys.

St. Thomas Journal. The action of the provincial government in nominating a candidate to oppose Allan Studholme in East Hamilton will not sit well with the labor interests of the province. Here was a man who for years had stood alone in the legislature as the direct representative of the toiler. In season and out of season he has advocated measures for the welfare of the wage earner, and never identified himself with either of the political parties. Yet a "dead set" has been made against Mr. Studholme by the conservative powers in an endeavor to drive him from public life.

Mr. Studholme's greatest crime seems to be that, in what he conceives to be the best interests of labor, he is a supporter of advanced temperance legislation. He is known to the laboring man as an advocate of tax reform; believing as he does that it is one of the greatest levers for adjusting the inequalities that mainly affect the workingman. On other matters of economics and social progress he has been fit to differ from the conservative leaders, but it has always been because he felt that it was doing the cause of labor was being better advanced.

No better example of the spirit of hostility towards labor could be adduced than in the opposition of the Whitneys to its champion, and if we mistake not, the wage earners will mark their disapprobation of the government's conduct, at the polls on June 29th in no uncertain way. This is not the only proof of where the laboring man stands on the question of labor reform. They have persistently refused to give the toilers and producers a representative in the cabinet, at the head of a department devoted solely to their interests, and in the workmen's compensation act they moved after seven years' delay only when forced by the liberals led by Rowell. The labor men will do well to remember all these things when they go to cast their ballots on election day.

The election orations in the city hall, immediately overhead were too much for the City Council on Monday evening, and that body, after convening and passing accounts, adjourned until the evening of Tuesday, the 30th, to finish its business, before taking its summer holidays. Mayor Shaw presided, and before him were Aids. Bews, Cooper, Clugston, Fair, Graham, Gillespie, Hughes, Litton, McCann, Nickle and O'Connor. Those present constituted exactly a quorum. After passing the accounts, presented in a report from the Finance committee, the aldermen made a hasty exit, and footed it to the hall above, only to find that the place was packed. Some of the city fathers put on their hats and went home, sorry that they did not sit and complete the business and not have to come back again, another night. A meeting of the Board of Works was to have been held before the council meeting to decide as to road paving in the residential sections, but Aid. Litton, the chairman of the board, could not muster a quorum of members, and so the paving tenders are held up, and cannot be acted upon for another week. Has a Fine Motorcycle.
