OGDENSBURG DEFENDS.

On Canadians to Make Glorious Fourth a Success.

Ogdensburg News—In common with numerous other northern New York cities and towns, Ogdensburg will celebrate July 4th in vigorous fashion. As in other years, the bulk of the visitors are expected to come from over the river, or "over" on "as they say in Water-town. When local promoters undertook to give a flying day to attract Canadians here Victoria day, May 24 last, a Montreal paper marveled at the attempt of Americans to "celebrate" the national day of the late queen. It is the fact, nevertheless, that if our Canadian cousins did not help us out on the fourth, our celebrations of the Ever Glorious would not be the great successes they generally are. And the best part of it is the Canadians seem to enjoy celebrating our Independence day as much as do the natives. This year the management has gone over the line for some of the strongest attractions that Canada has to offer, and among them will be the famed governor general's footguards band, which has played here so many times that the people can almost call each red-coat by name, and the Cardinal and Kenyville baseball teams. They have a league over there this year, while there is absolutely not a thing doing in a baseball way in Ogdensburg, and just now the two teams named are locked in a struggle for first place. Thus Canada will show us how she plays our national game. If the Montreal paper will send up another special commissioner, he will find that Ogdensburg not only "celebrates" Victoria day, but that masses of King George's loyal subjects detached themselves from the Dominion body politic long enough to help Ogdensburg celebrate the anniversary of the day America was lost to George the Third.

VOTES FOR WOMEN.

Speaker Clark Of the U.S. House Gives Them Encouragement.
Washington, June 29—"By 1917 or a little later women will be voting in every state in the union in national officials." Speaker Clark told a suffrage delegation Saturday, which presented him with 300 petitions from 38 states.
"Woman suffrage is as inevitable as the rising of to-morrow's sun," said the speaker, "so I hope you will continue in the peaceable way in which you have started."

Prohibition Plans Abandoned.

ODDFELLOWS GRAVES THE 14TH PREPARING TORONTO NEWS TOLD

IN CATARAQUI CEMETERY DECORATED ON SUNDAY. FOR ITS VISIT TO WATERTOWN. N. Y. FOR THE 4TH.

By The Various City Lodges—The Rain Interfered With the Speech-Making Part of the Programme.

The imposing ceremony of decorating the graves of their deceased comrades and friends was officially observed on Sunday morning by the Kingston Oddfellows and Rebekahs. One of the largest turnouts in some years attended this function. The various lodges of the order were all represented and included Kingston Canton, Cataraqui lodge, No. 10; Kingston, No. 59; Granite, No. 363; Louise, No. 10; Daughters of Rebekah.

The decoration committee in charge of this event outside of Kingston Canton was: W. Arniel, P. G., John Baker, P. G., J. Cruise for Cataraqui lodge, T. H. Funnell, P. G., Norman Reynolds, W. Hipson for Kingston; John Polly, P. G., G. Jacobs and A. W. Dunlop for Granite lodge and J. M. Davy, Mrs. J. Cruise, Mrs. Gwathmey for Louise lodge.

With abundance of flowers, each lodge representation went to the various quarters of the cemetery where with all solemnity they carefully placed that token of love upon the graves of those departed. In spite of the rain, this task was carried through to completion.

The first thing upon the programme after arriving at the cemetery was the procession to the I. O. O. F. lot where Chairman T. H. Funnell, P. G., addressed the gathering.

The opening ceremony of the noble grand was taken by W. J. Arniel, P. G., who made a few remarks, then called upon the chaplain, Mrs. White to offer the invocation.

The names of the deceased brethren were read by R. J. Diack, J. Leslie, J. Polle and Mrs. J. G. Hamilton for the respective lodges to which the dear comrades formerly belonged. After the singing of two hymns, "Forever With the Lord," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," little Miss Thelma Mae Marshall performed the duties of "Floral Offering," when she placed beside the graves in the I. O. O. F. plot, a handsome wreath bearing the shape of a triple link. The remainder of the programme was omitted on account of the rain which came down in torrents thus forcing Mr. Funnell to bring the programme to a close by having the benediction pronounced by the chaplain.

PANAMA HATS POPULAR

Taste Displayed This Year in Trimming Them.

Panama hats are more popular than ever this season. Not so many years ago a woman considered one a luxury. The idea of the Panam that was originally borrowed from the men, and heretofore the style of trimming, with very few exceptions, was borrowed from them likewise. But this season women are to display individual taste. There is no apparent trend to the attractive combinations of colors and trimmings that may be used. Persian ribbon plaids and Roman stripes in wonderful colorings are very popular. Ribbon five to six inches wide, crushed around the crown of the hat, with a big bow toward the left, may be used, with a 1-2 inch grosgrain ribbon with a neat flat bow. If the wide ribbon is used a girdle of the same often completes a costume worn at the same time, and in the case of the narrow ribbon, the predominating color can usually be matched and some sort of a pretty color scheme worked out. The grosgrain ribbon also, comes pleated in plain colors, and very often the pleated edge is of contrasting color to the ribbon itself. It also comes in smart polka dot effects.

The woman handy with her needle may make some very pretty things. Cut a strip of any soft, white material that left over from your summer frock will do nicely—to be two and a half or three inches wide when completed, and long enough to go around the crown and make a small flat bow. Stamp about two inches apart in one-inch squares, circles, fleur de lys or some attractive design and work solid in French knots, using heavy floss. One color may be used or two or three combined. An attractive costume may be secured by embroidering collar, cuffs, girdle, and hat band to match.

ROWELL ENDED CAMPAIGN

By a Speech at Woodstock on Saturday Night.

Woodstock, June 29—Newton W. Rowell, leader of the liberals of Ontario, brought his election campaign to a close here Saturday night. He addressed a monster gathering in the Arena, thus ending his whirlwind campaign, in which he had visited every part of the province, awakening an enthusiasm never equalled by a political leader in so short a space of time and caused by his policy of abolish the barrooms.

Concluding his speech with eloquence despite his hoarse voice, Mr. Rowell said: "There is the issue—organized Christianity speaking through its representative synods and assemblies on the one hand, and the organized liquor traffic on the other. On Monday next these two forces meet in battle array in the greatest contest this province has ever witnessed. All Canada is looking. Great Britain is looking, and Australia and New Zealand are looking on. If the forces of Christianity win, the bar is defeated it means a temperance throughout the world. If the bar wins, it means a note of discouragement to temperance workers throughout the world. The organized liquor interests are doing everything they can to defeat me and to defeat this policy in the adjoining constituency. I believe their work will come to naught."

Waterloo, N. Y., has for some weeks been planning for a grand celebration of the 4th of July this year. Chief of the features will be the elaborate street carnival in that city's large square in the business section.

The 14th regiment of this city, which is the Canadian corps invited for the celebration on Saturday, is assured of a good reception and pleasant time while there. The 14th, leaving here on Friday evening, will arrive in Watertown about eleven o'clock. When the local volunteer battalion visited there for the 4th some years ago, arriving about midnight, hundreds of the Americans gave their Canadian cousins a pronounced welcome. It was a continuous round of fire works for nearly half an hour.

Upon the arrival of the 14th this morning, Saturday, the regiment will march direct to the armories, where the men will be quartered and fed during their stay. There is a large mess hall in the basement of the Watertown armories. The Kingston riflemen will take part in the parade on Saturday morning.

The 4th is to go over to Watertown between 300 and 400 strong, likely in drill order dress, which is the khaki. Needless to say, the boys are keen on the trip, which will terminate a banner drill season for the local corps.

It was three years ago, under Lieut.-Col. A. B. Cunningham's command, the 14th, as other city corps, commenced a period of annual field operations. In 1912 the 14th was well represented at Barrieffield camp. Last year the programme was somewhat different to a fixed camp, for the Kingston volunteers participated in the "trek" of the city corps of this division, the first of its kind conducted for the Canadian militia. It was very instructive to all ranks. Then, this year, the regiment was equally well represented to report at Petawawa for manoeuvres. The 14th was with the column which came in for the hardest work, and though the miscarrying of some arrangements made it a little distasteful for the men at times, now, that it is over, the members of the regiment are glad of the experience. As one of the N. C. O.'s said: "We did not expect Petawawa was going to be a picnic jaunt. The old regiment is willing to take the rough with the smooth every time."

The trip was a valuable experience for the riflemen. There were no big flies or mosquitoes as were talked about before the regiment left. There was little rain. The nights were not cold, just beautiful for bivouac.

A soldierly whose forte is its efficiency at ceremonial only should, if ever called out on active service, make a pretty spectacle.

THE TRUTH ABOUT N. W. HOWLAND'S MONEY.

Now that the election is over, it might be pointed out that the Toronto News, which, in the hands of the united Tory-whiskey ring, led the campaign of vilification against N. W. Howland, printed the following at the time his able service saved the 800 industries from wreck:

"It would be hard to overestimate the value of Mr. Howland's services as representing the government in untangling the extraordinary maze of confusion and embarrassment which had developed in connection with these enterprises.

"It is not understood by the public, and probably never will be fully understood, that his was the master mind which adjusted the relation between the province and the company and solved the almost inseparable difficulties which were met at every step of the reorganization.

"Nor is it understood that although he performed these great services for the province, he drew no money from the provincial treasury, while it was perhaps natural that the Whitney government should have accepted his resignation as one of the board of directors. It is satisfactory to know that he is still a solicitor for the company and that in this connection no political consideration can enter, and that, therefore, the company and the province will continue to profit by his experience, ability and integrity."

OLDEST KNIGHT A LINK WITH PAST.

Sir Charles Boucher de Boucherville is 92, and sits in Two Legislative Bodies.

The Honorable Senator Charles Boucher de Boucherville, who has just been made a Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George, is not only one of the oldest members of the Upper Chamber at Ottawa, but actually the senior member of the Legislative council at Quebec, being called to that body at Confederation, and being its first speaker. He is the only remaining public man in Canada who occupies seats in two legislative bodies, his appointment to the senate of Canada, as well as to the legislative council of Quebec antedating the passage of the law abolishing dual representation. He was called to the senate in 1879. The mention of Senator de Boucherville's name takes one back many years in the political history of Canada when the names of Chauveau, Belleau, Cartier, Cauchon, and Dorion were to the fore; and in the front rank in the close, bitter, political fighting of those days was the doughty "Doctor" de Boucherville. He was in his prime known as "the fighting doctor," and he was regarded for years as the champion of the Ultramontane wing of the conservative party.

Perhaps the most active period of his political career closed shortly after the dismissal of the government of which he was premier by Lieut.-Governor Letellier de St. Just, in 1870. Immediately following this famous coup-d'etat Mr. de Boucherville made a vigorous and affecting protest, which attracted much attention; but the energy he threw into the effort affected his health for some time.

When in 1893, Lieut.-Governor Angers dismissed the Mercier government and was looking about for a new premier, he picked out Senator de Boucherville as the safest and most acceptable man available; and after some hesitation on his own part, he accepted the post and formed a government, but retained the premiership long enough merely to see it properly organized and established, and turned over the reins of power to the Hon. L. O. Taillon in December, 1894.

Since that time he has stood somewhat in the background in the field of politics, taking, however, an intelligent interest in public affairs and attending the sittings of both the senate and legislative council with pretty fair regularity. When the Dominion parliament and the Quebec legislature are both in session at the same time the Honorable gentleman's preference, and quite naturally considering the prominent part he has played in provincial politics, seems to be for the Quebec chamber, and his influence there is still considerable. In the senate he very seldom speaks at length; but what he does say, his remarks are listened to with attention by the whole house. In private life he has until recent years, so far as his seasonal duties would allow, lived the life of a retired country gentleman at his seat, "Le Domaine," a Boucherville, on the south bank of the St. Lawrence, a few miles below Montreal, and there with his old political friends he loved to chat over the doings of old times and of the eminent men who figured in them. During the past few years he has made his home in the city of Montreal, and celebrated his ninety-second birthday, but when his very active life is considered, one would scarcely suspect his age, for he has still an erect, broad-shouldered figure. He was born at Boucherville, pursued his medical course and obtained his degree at Paris university, and for many years thereafter practised his profession in the district between the St. Lawrence and Richelieu rivers. His name first appears in the public records of the Canadian assembly, to which he was elected in 1861, retaining his seat up to Confederation. Besides being one of the legislative council at the time, he was a member of the Chauveau administration "immediately after Confederation retiring with the government in 1872 and succeeding to the premiership in succession to Mr. Gwynne in 1874. The Senator belongs to one of the oldest families in French Canada, being descended from Lieutenant-General Pierre Boucher, Sieur de Grosbois, who became governor of Three Rivers in 1653, and was also grand senechal of New France.

The Prince of Wales showed himself quite a soldier in the British military manoeuvres.
