WAS PUT OFF TRAIN

FOR USING ABUSIVE LANGUAGE TO THE CONDUCTOR.

Magistrate Pointed Out to William E. Simpson That His Offence Was a Serious One, and Remanded Him a Day for Sentence.

"The offence is a serious one, particularly so on account of the place where it took place. In the railway coach there were men, women and children, and they were forced to listen to your profanity as there was nothing else for them to do. The law makes it a serious offence, and rightly so. Every precaution must be taken to see that railway passengers are safeguarded. There is no doubt of your guilt. The conductor who took action to have you put off the train is to be commended. I have seen conductors who would allow such conduct, but in this case I think the conductor should be commended for the way he acted."

Magistrate Farrell made the above statement in the police court, on Thursday morning, in summing up the case of William E. Simpson, who was arrested a few days ago, on a charge of using profane language on train No. 14, on the Grand Trunk railway, while it was in Kingston at 1.30 p.m. on June 25th. Simpson was first remanded for a few days, and on Thursday morning the magistrate further remanded him for a day for sentence. The conductor and porter on the train gave evidence against the accused, who pleaded with the magistrate to make the penalty as easy as he could, in view of the fact that it was the first time he had ever got into trouble.

According to the evidence of David White, the conductor, and the train porter, George W. McDonald, Simpson was lounging in one seat and had his feet up on the seat ahead, allowing his feet to project into the aisle, to the inconvenience of passengers who happened to be passing to and fro.

Conductor White pulled down the obstruction, whereupon Simpson became much annoyed and abused the conductor in language which would not look well in print. Then, with the aid of the porter, the conductor put Simpson, with bag and baggage, off the train, telling him that he could not continue his journey to Mattitauk. He was afterwards locked up by the police. Simpson had been drinking, and he told the magistrate that he had no recollection whatever of using the bad language credited to him.

Had to Amputate Leg.

Mrs. M. Rupert, the unfortunate young lady who met with the serious accident at Lansdowne, by jumping out of a buggy when the horse driving it ran away, on June 21st, had to have her limb amputated above the knee, at the Hotel Dieu. She received a compound fracture, but grass and other poisonous substances got into the wound caused by the bone protruding through the flesh. It was hoped at first that the bone might be saved and everything possible was done to avoid amputation. However, her condition gradually grew worse and at eight o'clock, Wednesday evening the operation was performed. Mrs. Rupert was formerly Miss Shannon, of Kingston.

The work of getting things ready for the arrival of the cadets of the 3rd divisional area, who go into camp on Barfield Heights on Monday morning July 6th, was commenced on Thursday. On Wednesday night a number of the R. C. R. who were in camp at Petawawa arrived in the city and immediately proceeded to Barfield. They will see that all the tents are pitched and everything is in readiness by Monday morning. The cadets will arrive in the city on every train on Monday. It is expected that by Tuesday there will be about three thousand under canvas. The camp will last until Saturday July 12th. During the six days the boys will receive valuable training. It is expected that about three hundred Kingston boys will go into camp. Any local boys who carry newspapers will be allowed to leave the camp grounds every afternoon for the purpose of delivering their papers.

IS ACCUSED OF THEFT.

Had Five Bottles of Whiskey and Two Sides of Ham.

Five large bottles of whiskey, two sides of ham and a half dozen boxes of "crackerjack," the delight of all "kiddie" and many grown-up people as well, were carried into the police court by constables on Thursday morning, and laid on the table before Magistrate Farrell.

William Devlin, of middle age, stood in the prisoners' dock accused of stealing the goods, but he pleaded "not guilty," and after the evidence of a constable had been taken, the accused was committed to stand trial before a judge and jury, he having asked that his case be tried in this way.

Constable Nicholson was called to tell about the goods. He said that at 11.45 o'clock Wednesday night he and Constable Jenkins were walking together on King street, when they noticed Devlin, standing at the corner of Barrack street. Constable Jenkins made the remark that the accused was drunk. The two constables rounded up the man near the foot of Queen street, with the goods mentioned in his possession. He had three of the bottles of whiskey tucked away in his pockets and the other two and the ham and crackerjacks under his arm. The whiskey had not been sampled.

Questioned by the constable, Devlin stated that a man had left the goods near the G.F.R. freight sheds for him. The constables afterwards investigated, and they found that the goods had been stolen from the G.F.R. freight sheds.

Telling Liberals How to Win.

47TH REGIMENT HEROES. I Did Splendid Work at the Petawawa Camp. On leaving Petawawa camp the O.C. of the 47th Regiment, Frontenac, was congratulated by the staff officers in having the distinguished regiment in that sham battle. The 47th Regiment fought its way through to Chalk River village, and captured a regiment of cavalry, and on the return trip, the officer commanding the 7th Brigade ordered the 47th Regiment, as a reserve, and had practically an easy day the second day. The third day it acted as support, and was brought into the firing line, in view of the inspecting officers. When the O.C. of the 47th Regiment noticed the enemy's cavalry coming with full speed, making a rear attack, he ordered the regiment to change front, and form a rear attack, when clouds of smoke went into the air, and the cavalry was turned. This was considered the best move in the sham battle, by all who viewed it.
