WHEN ROYALTY TRAVELS.

Expenses of King Edward's India Trip Were Justified.

One of the main items of expenditure piled up by the recent royal visit to Paris is the $150,000 that has been spent in preparing the British Embassy in the French Capital for such exalted occupation. This amount seems a large one, but royal visits cannot be undertaken cheaply.

The most costly journey executed by our royalty in recent times was the late King Edward's tour to India, when Prince of Wales, in 1875. The tour was arranged by Sir Bartle Frere, who spent seven busy months in working out its details. Parliament voted for general expense $300,000, which Sir Bartle said was quite inadequate, as the presents to dusty princes would amount to nearly that sum, and he asked for $500,000.

His request was refused, however, though the Indian Treasury voted $50,000 to the presents fund. In addition to this, another $250,000 came out of the Naval Estimates, and some people who thought such expenditure unwarrantable actually held a meeting of protest in Hyde Park. So that her son could create a proper impression amongst native rulers, Queen Victoria gave him $1,000,000 out of her own private purse, and it will be seen, therefore, that King Edward's trip cost more than $1,500,000. Results have proved that it was worth the money.

King George's visit to India thirty years later, when Prince of Wales, cost nearly $1,250,000, of which Parliament contributed $100,000, though the cost of altering the Reservoirs was borne by the Ophir to Australia cost $800,000, whilst his little jaunt to Canada some years ago involved a modest $100,000.

The Kaiser loves plenty of pomp and splendor when he journeys from the Fatherland. Some time ago he visited the Sultan of Turkey at Constantinople, and then traveled, chiefly overland, to Jerusalem. He was accompanied by enough servants to people a small town.

More than 800 mule-drivers and 300 waiters followed him! It took three special trains to convey him and his baggage from the Holy City to Jaffa, and he always had his table laid for thirty or forty people, dining as though he were at his palace at home.

But Germany's ruler must take a little slack when compared with the late Shah of Persia, who, during his six months' tour of Europe in 1873 contrived to scatter no less a sum than $10,000,000.

Hero of the Frozen South.

The picture of the year at the Royal Academy, England, is said to be that entitled "A Very Gallant Gentleman."

In the Captain Oates memorial picture painted by J. C. Bollmann for the Cavalry Club, of which the gallant officer—who perished with Captain Scott in the Frozen South—was a member. The painting is six feet high and illustrates the supreme moment of Capt. Oates' tragic act of heroism.

Mr. Dollman gives us a vivid word-picture of his work. I have painted Oates moving away from the tent, which is seen dimly to the left through the whirling snow-eddies of a blizzard. Bent, crouching almost double, one hand helping to support his crippled leg, the other stretched out blindly in front of him, he is trying to lift himself along. Between his figure and the tent there is crumpled and scattered snow, to mark where he has stumbled and fallen and painfully dragged himself up again.

I have tried to make the tracks in the snow eloquent of his story. Through the door of the tent a warm glow of color is visible, suggesting warmth inside. This contrast deepens the poignancy of the situation and reflects the grey color of the wilderness of snow.

They Charged Overtime.

Wilson Barrett used to tell an amusing story against himself. At a time when he had a lot of workmen redecorating his private residence, thinking to give them a treat, he asked if, after work one evening they would like to have seats to go and see him play in "The Lights of London," at the Princess Theatre.

They said they didn't mind if they did, and being complimentary tickets, all went on a Saturday night to see their employer's performance.

At the end of the week Barrett's eye caught sight of this item against each workman's name on the pay-sheet: "Saturday night. Four hours overtime at Princess Theatre, eight shillings."

Must Pay Penalty.

The late Rev. Silvester Horne, who died on a steamer just before arriving in Toronto recently, and who represented Ipswich in the British Parliament, used to tell an amusing story concerning a visit which Mr. Balfour once paid to that town. An old lady, hard of hearing, seeing the crowd of people outside the station and the extra police present, mixed up the Unionist leader's arrival with the Ipswich Assizes, and asked a neighbor for whom they were waiting. When she was told it was Mr. Balfour, the old lady said: "Well, I suppose if the poor man has done anything wrong he's got to suffer for it."

He Was Off.

A story of life in the Civil Service in the bad old days was told at a dinner by Sir Thomas Elliott, Deputy Minister of the Mint. One typical offender was wont to say, after the clock had struck three, "Fifty-nine minutes to four! If it is only a question of minutes, I may as well be off!"—and he went!

Colleges In India.

There are 176 colleges in British India.

And every sweet girl graduate expects to marry and rule the roost sooner or later.

If she could talk anglers would have to revise their yarns.

NEARLY IN CONVULSIONS

With Acute Indigestion. "Fruit-a-ives" Cured Me.

NEWBURY, ONT., MAY 29th, 1913. I am not a strenuous user of medicines or patent medicines, but I have taken nearly everything recommended for Indigestion and Constipation.

I have been so bad with Acute Indigestion that I was nearly in convulsions and had to be held. I have used "Fruit-a-ives" and I have not had another attack nor suffered at all with indigestion since taking them.

"Fruit-a-ives" is the only remedy I ever used that did me any good, and I am grateful to "Fruit-a-ives" for making me as well as I am today, and everyone agrees that I look in first-class health.

My husband likes "Fruit-a-ives" very much and takes them whenever he has occasion to use a remedy for Constipation.

"Fruit-a-ives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or will be sent to any address on receipt of price by Fruit-a-ives Limited, Ottawa.
