A STUNNING MODEL

jacket and Russian tunio skirt form a chic combination.

Smart dressmakers have begun to ring in variations upon the Russian tunic costume, and one is shown today

Charming model for a summer suit to be made of plain and striped linen that will be sure to find favor. It is suitable to development in linen, plain and striped effects being combined. The French linens that cost from 40 cents a yard upward come in the patterns that make up this suit' most effectively in wash materials. They are also exceedingly smart in silk. The Eton jacket is unusually attractive. To make, the dress requires 21/9 yards of striped and 5 yards of plain material 44 inches wide.

The linen should first be folded carefully; then the parts of the pattern marked by triple "TTT" perforations -laid along the fold. For short sleeves the lower parts of the sleeve are cut off. Indications are also given for a lower effect for the neck if same is desired. The lower edge of the overfront of the jacket may be finished straight if desired, but the cut out effect exposing the vest is very desirable. In making, the vest is first finished by taking up the dart at the front and hemming. Then pleat the front, placing "I" on single large "O" perforation and tack. Arrange front on vest, shoulder, under-arm and armhole edges even. Close under arm seam as notched; close shoulder seam. Sew collar to neck edge as notched. Sleeve .- For short sleeve see cutting directions. Close seams as notched elbow. Close cuff seam as notched sew to short sleeve, double "oo" perforations even, single small "o" perforation at inside seam of sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole, inside seam at notch in front, easing any fullness between double "TT" perforations. Close the sleeve seams, add cuffs and sew into armhole, easing any fullness between double "TT" perforations. Finish the neck with accordion pleated hemstitched ruffle.
