AN INCIDENT OF 1866.

Firing of Cannons as Warning of Fenians Coming.

The ringing of St. Andrew's chiming on Thursday night for the report that British were victorious in the North Sea incited an old resident to tell this story to the Whig. Along about '66 the city was all excitement, just as it is now, waiting for something to happen. The Fenians were reported to be invading Canada all along the border. In front of the city buildings was what was known as the "market guard," a tall wall that has since been torn down, about where the G. T. R. track now is. There were eight big cannons that had been loaded in case of emergency, peeping through the wall. Two citizens, supposed to be one Craig and the other Ferguson by names, by means of wires in the dead quiet of night fired off the cannons. They went off one after the other and every one rushed down to see the Fenians. This was perhaps the best practical joke ever played in Kingston, although the people who came down expecting the Fenians could not appreciate it as such.

REAL ESTATE BUSINESS

Has Been Affected in Kingston by the War.

"Business is practically dead," said a prominent real estate man to the Whig on Friday afternoon. "And it is all due to the war," he added. "People are so worked up over the war that they will not talk business, let alone put through a deal. All this week it has been hard to do any business, and it is likely to remain in the state until the war is over."

Price Of Shoes Advance.

"The price of shoes will advance at least twenty-five per cent." This is the statement made to a Whig representative about the effect of the war on the shoe trade. A notice has been sent out that the sole leather used in the making of shoes has advanced twelve cents a pound in the last twenty-four hours.

A PATRIOTIC CONCERT given in Macdonald Park By the R.C.H.A. Band. A great crowd gathered in Macdonald park on Friday night to hear a programme of patriotic music by the R. C. H. A. band, which is some from Petawawa camp, and ready for active service. It was a delightfully warm night, and the cover hill and water scenes were something to be remembered. The hillside was a mass of sitting humanity. The grand patriotic overture of national airs of the British empire stirred the assemblage, while the anthems of all nations ending with "Rule Britannia," brought forth the greatest enthusiasm. By request, this selection was repeated at the close of the programme. The Belgian national anthem elicited marked applause as the public appreciate the great valor displayed by the Belgians in holding back the German horde of invaders at Liege. Rogan's grand military tattoo was the concluding number of the programme, and the playing the evening hymn, "Abide With Me," and the sounding of "The Last Post," were very impressive. Lieut.-Light the bandmaster received praise for the fine programme he selected, so fitting in this war time, and upon the increased excellence of his band, which would be a credit to any British corps of regulars.

THE BANK RATE. The Raising and Lowering of It Was Unusual. The raising and lowering of the bank rate recently was unusual. Just before the declarations of war there was a scramble in the market for gold, and to keep it at home the English rate was raised to ten per cent. Such a rate not only stopped exportation of gold, but tied up the loose or current coin. In England there was no paper money under the five pound note. With the disappearance of change, there was a real money stringency. Change gold not be made. With war the foreign nations could not get gold at any price. The government then rendered the bank rate at 6 per cent. and issued emergency currency at £1. s10 for fractional currency. The price of wheat and of British consuls will tell the tale of war as it happens and a lowering of the bank rate below 6 per cent. will not likely be made until success is assured.
