

FRANCE KEEPS SILENT

WHEREABOUTS OF GENERAL JOFFRE NOT DISCLOSED.

The London Chronicle Says That Rejoicing Is 'Premature'—Sounds Warning Against Over Optimism.

Paris, Aug. 13.—France continues her policy of making war silently. Although the greatest armies ever formed are not possibly in combat on the eastern frontier, not a single whisper has reached the capital as to what is actually happening.

Not even the whereabouts of the commander-in-chief, General Joffre, is known. So closely is the news guarded that the best methods to determine the whereabouts of Joffre are not to be noted by the press.

The records of the year 1870 show that the headquarters of the French army were not in Paris but in the town of Chalons.

It is interesting to note the change of attitude of the allied powers who a week ago seemed to have the idea that they must interfere to prevent France from being crushed.

Telegrams received indicate that the French are fighting with bayonets and no amount of perfection in drilling can bring the Germans successfully through the test.

Rejoicing Premature. London, Aug. 13.—The disposition to accept the first incidents of the war as glorious omens of the future conduct of operations is being counterbalanced by sober thought.

"Because our navy," says the Daily Chronicle, "with the loss of but one small German craft and nearly cleared the seas of the rest, it does not at all follow that we have decided the naval conflicts."

"The great German navy waits in its impregnable harbors, practically intact and ready to take any opportunity which may offer, with reserves that we cannot determine beforehand."

Were the H.M.C.S. Niobe equipped and at sea she would be of incalculable value to British commerce, in the opinion of Lieut. W. H. Hatcher, R.N.R., chief officer of the Mauretania, who arrived to-day.

For Freckled, Tanned, Red or Wrinkled Skin

Just beneath that freckled, tanned or reddened complexion there's an exquisitely beautiful skin of youthful purity and delicacy. If you could only bring this complexion to the surface, discarding the discolored one, you'd be the envy of the world. Most natural manner imaginable. Just get an ounce of our 'Skin Reviver' and apply it night and day, removing it mornings with warm water. The water will be gradually peeling off the flaking particles of scorched and half-dead surface skin, causing no discomfort whatever. Cutaneous defects like pimples, blotches, liver spots, moths, freckles, of course disappear with the old skin. Nothing else will accomplish such wonderful results in so short a time. Fine lines and even deeper wrinkles often appear at this season. In such cases nothing is better than a face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered salicylic acid in 1-2 pt. witch hazel. This is remarkably effective.
