What Policeman Mullinger Says.

Police Constable Thomas Mullinger laughs at the tales of an aeroplane being seen and heard over Kingston at night. He has as good ears as anyone, he says, and although he has been all over the town on night duty, and scanned the late horizon, he has yet failed to see anything mysterious flying through the air. "It's all imagination," he told a Whig representative Friday night, as he scribbled and the peeler gazed heavenward. "A box kite may be flying somewhere, and, aided by the noise of those blasted motor boats, people think a German airship is here to blow up the town," was P.C. Mullinger's explanation.
