DOMINANT FIGURE

BUT BY NATURE IRISH LEADER IS RESERVED, AND SHY

A Fine Elocutionist—Was Suspended From House Two Hours After First Taking Seat There.

One of the dominant and most powerful members of the British House of Commons to-day is John Redmond, the leader of the Irish nationalist party.

John Redmond must be given a place among the first twelve men of the House of Commons, his contemporaries, in my opinion, being Mr. Asquith, Mr. Balfour, Lloyd George, Mr. Law, Sir Edward Grey, Mr. Churchill, Sir Edward Carson, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. Robert Cecil, and Mr. Philip Snowden.

In the House of Commons, as in all bodies of men, looks and appearance tell in making lasting and true impressions to speak from the corner of the top bench below the gangway on the opposition side, he is seen to be of a portly habit, with an impressive air of dignity, suavity and strength.

John Redmond, may, perhaps, be described as the only orator in the House of Commons. His style of speech is far removed from the flowery and ornate, which is associated with the popular idea of Irish rhetoric.

Mr. Redmond comes of a county family of good standing in Wexford. His father sat in the House of Commons for the borough of Wexford in the twenties, and his mother was a daughter of Gen. Hoey. He was educated at Clongowes, the great school of the Jesuits in Ireland.

For a time the choice of a profession was a matter of doubt. Mr. Redmond thought of becoming a priest and joining the Jesuit order; he thought also of the army, with which his family was connected on both sides.

The appointment was decisive of Mr. Redmond's fate. The clerks of the House of Commons have the privilege of standing near the bar, or sitting in a section of the members' galleries, during a debate.

Consequently Mr. Redmond was not new to parliamentary life when on Feb. 2nd, 1881, he took his seat as a Parnellite for New Ross, a Wexford borough extinguished by Mr. Gladstone's redistribution scheme of 1885.

Money will do a lot of things, but it won't help a man any if his garter falls over his shoe when he's in a ball room.

MONEY IN PLAYS.

Fortunes Which Authors Have Taken From Their Dramas.

The famous melodrama, "The Silver King," which was played recently at His Majesty Theatre before a royal audience in the cause of charity, has established several reputations and made fortunes for a number of people.

Referring again to "The Silver King," it is interesting to note that the play definitely decided Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, the collaborator with Henry Herman in the authorship, to devote himself to drama.

It is doubtful, however, if any play has made so much money as the still-running "Charley Aunt." During the performance of this famous farce at the Globe and Royalty Theatres, it earned $1,000,000 for the late Mr. Penley alone, and he had to share the profits with two others, while it is estimated that Mr. Brandon Thomas must have made $300,000 out of the play.

"The Private Secretary," adapted from the German by Mr. Charles Hawtry, brought that gentleman $175,000 at least during its first run at the Globe, and its first tour.

Turning to musical comedy, Mr. Gilbert, who has composed the music for "The Joy-Ride Lady," at present running at the Garrick Theatre, confesses that his income for some years has been at least $15,000 a month.

We are promised sensational developments in the science of aerial navigation and by such a supposedly unscientific person as a coal-miner at that.

The interest taking just now in life-saving appliances reminds us of Captain Boyton and his life-saving dress. This was an inflated rubber garment, in which the wearer floated on his back.

The Governor's salary is to be increased in Newfoundland. The Legislature recently passed a bill increasing the salary and allowances of the Governor (Mr. W. E. Davidson, C.M.G.) from $11,000 to $15,000.

Lots of people would rather send a dollar to the heathen than give the poor at home a pleasant look.

THE MAN WHO KEEPS HIS HEAD.

'Britain's Motto: Business as Usual.'—H. E. Morgan.

There's a man who fights for England, and he'll keep her still atop. He will guard her from dishonor in the market and the shop.

Let the foe who strikes at England hear her wheels of commerce turn. Let the ships that war with England see her factory furnace burn.

Brand him traitor and assassin who with miser's coward mood Has his gold locked up in secret and his larders stored with food.

Let the poor man teach the rich man, for the poor man's constant strife Is from day to day to seek work, day by day to war with life.

When the ships come back from slaughter, and the troops march home from war; When the havoc strewn behind us threatens the road that lies before.

Every hero shall be welcomed, every orphan shall be fed. By the man who stuck to business, by the man who kept his head.

—HAROLD BEGGIE.

broadcloth, duvetyne or velveteen are suggested for its development. For general use, however, it is effective in tweed, rough serge, wide wale suiting, etc.

QUEER ROYAL RENTS.

Porridge, Snow and Roses Due to the King of England.

Some of the rents which are the due of King George of England from certain of his loyal subjects are "more honored in the breach than in the observance."

Quite a different and much more desirable rent is the one which has been charged to the tenant of Crenodon, in Buckinghamshire, from time immemorial.

In September every year two fragrant garlands are paid at the London law courts by the city remembrancer as rent for lands held by the city corporation from His Majesty the King.

When the King lately went across the channel to pay his state visit to Paris he ought to have been attended across the briny ocean by the present representative, Solomon Atfield, to whom King John gave his lands on condition that whenever he or any of his successors crossed the channel, the said Solomon or his heirs should be in attendance to hold up the King's head when he was seasick.

His title was the royal headholder. If the King should pay a visit to Aylesbury why the ducks come from—the inhabitant is supposed to supply him with a three eels if it is winter, and with two fat geese if it is summer.

The Moustache in History. The sad case of the French chasseur who is confined to barracks until his moustache has well sprouted again recalls, by contrast, the day when the directors of the Bank of England ordered their clerks not to wear moustaches during their business hours—

Dean Ramsay and Bannockburn. Scotsmen have always affected a certain commiseration for Southrons when mentioning Bannockburn.

Articles have appeared in the Belgian press urging that the Government should take steps to terminate the annual grant of $40,000 made to the Duke of Wellington as successor to the duke who won the Battle of Waterloo.

Great Britain's New War. Great Britain is pushing a war on race track gambling. In the House of Lords a bill has been introduced by Lord Newton to prevent the writing, publishing or circulation of any advertisements relating to betting or tipsters' business.
