LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

B. I. Reilly Writes About Kingston Separate Schools.

Vibank, Sask., Aug. 29.—(To the Editor): In the Canadian Freeman of July 15th, there appeared an editorial on the success of the Catholic educational institutions of Kingston this year. On receipt of this issue of the Freeman I wrote a courteous letter to the Freeman editor, but four issues of the paper have since reached me and my letter has not appeared. It was my intention that this should be made public, and hence, for the lower schools, I am a reader, I will review the chief points with which my letter dealt.

On the salient points with which the editorial in question dealt, I am perfectly in accord with the views expressed in the first place the suits of the separate schools this year are very creditable and I join in congratulating those teachers who were immediately responsible for the results, and the pupils themselves, particularly the entrance candidates of St. Mary's school many of whom were in the lower grades when I left the school. In the second place I quite agree that secular and religious training are not incompatible with each other but are mutually complementary and that for temporal as well as spiritual reasons religion should not be ignored in the school curriculum. No fair minded man can view the results of the separate schools during the past few years in such representative educational centres as Toronto, Kingston, Hamilton, or London, without becoming convinced that religious instruction is no detriment to secular training.

But while agreeing on general principle with the article, I wish to point out an inaccuracy in detail which was made, in good faith, no doubt, when a comparison was instituted between the separate schools results of this year and those of past years. The opening sentence of the article states: "Already there is sufficient information to hand to make us feel confident that the success of our educational institutions in the past will be equally if not indeed surpassed, this year."

While this sentence is vetted in ambiguity, the impression which it conveys is that this is the record year in history of the Catholic educational institutions of Kingston, and among these institutions, St. Mary's school seems in the article to receive the chief emphasis. The credit which is given this school is based on what I agree to have been a splendid show of twenty-three successful candidates of whom one took honors at the entrance examinations I notice further that eighty-two per cent. of the candidates who wrote were successful. Liberal praise for these results meets with my warmest approval, but the unfortunate sentence which institutes comparison with previous years, and more particularly the insertion of the clause "if not indeed surpassed," compels me, though with much regret, to place before your readers the following facts.

In the year 1908, out of twenty-six candidates from St. Mary's school who were recommended to the entrance examinations twenty-four were successful (i. e., about 92 per cent.) and of these, four took honors. In 1909 out of twenty-five candidates, twenty-four were successful (i. e., 96 per cent.), and three took honors. Among the successful candidates each year both on the pass and honor roll, a good percentage were juniors who did the work of junior and senior fourth combined in one year. These are facts, without the slightest alloy of fiction, were announced in the columns of the Freeman these respective years, and are recorded at the office of the inspector of public schools at the present time. Let me also remind your readers that the entrance examinations set by the educational department these years were so very difficult, and the slaughter of candidates throughout the province was so general that the department was attacked bitterly in the editorial columns of the newspapers of both political parties. I utter no complaint that the practically ceaseless toll which was "immediately" responsible for these results was rewarded for two years by a salary of $600, and the third and fourth years by $700 and $750 respectively. Apart from the necessity of a living wage, it is not so much by the almighty dollar as by a candid recognition and just appreciation of honest and faithful services that the man in pedagogy as well as in many other walks of life considers himself best rewarded from the worldly point of view. With due respect to the Freeman, and to my successor in St. Mary's school who is doing good work, I merely request that, when it is found necessary for some local, immediate or personal object, to resort to comparisons in which the writer of this letter is concerned, there should be a strict adherence to facts. Am I justified in making this request?

In conclusion I fully agree with
