IN BATTLE AT MONS

LIEUT. WILLIAM MACKIE IS AT THE FRONT.

A Letter Has Reached His Parents at Montreal, But Little Information Was Allowed Through by the Censor.

William Mackie, son of Rev. John Mackie, former pastor of St. Andrew's church, is now at the front serving his country. A letter received by his parents, just recently, stated that he had taken part in the battle near Mons. As the letter had passed through the hands of the British censors, there was little or no information in it.

A report was in circulation to the effect that the lieutenant had been taken prisoner by the Germans, but the family have not heard anything to that effect.

Lieut. Mackie is a graduate of the Royal Military College.

Col. Duff On Duty.

Lieut.-Col. H. K. Duff, injured at Valenciennes camp, reported for duty at the armories on Monday morning.

Civil War Veterans.

Prince Edward county's list of veterans of the American civil war is gradually growing less. Last Friday morning all that are left of them, nine, appeared before Mr. Thomas Wainwright, who acts for the American government in the case of veterans, in proof of their claims for continuance of pensions. Of the nine only two are now under seventy, three are in the eighties, and the rest are well into the seventies. All happened to be in Mr. Wainwright's office at the same time on Friday morning. Those reporting are: Frederick D. Hawkins, Andrew W. Buchanan, Chester Hare, Caleb W. Chandler, Alvin M. Doane, Reuben Henderson, Jacob Henderson, William Baille, John N. Noxon, Leander M. Smith.

Besides the civil war list two other pensioners who reside in this county answered to their names: Alva Fox, regular establishment; John. Oberschmidt, Spanish-American war.

Will Send More Men.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Toronto. "There is a difference between the British nation and the nations of the continent. The nations of the continent get their soldiers by law, by conscription, and the enforcement of authority; the British nation get their soldiers not by law, but by appealing to the patriotism of the men. Lord Kitchener tells us he wants more soldiers. If he wants more soldiers from Canada let him say the word and we will respond to meet him. We are behind the mother country, and let us send them a message that this war must be fought to a finish, and that arms must not be laid down until the principle for which it has been fought is vindicated, and until the day has come when right takes the place of might." (Loud cheering.)

Our Callous Hearts.

New York Sun. "Is it not strange that we go about in the ordinary way, eating, drinking, sleeping, buying and selling, even merrymaking with careless spirits and vain words, just as if the tragedy of the ages were not in progress within reach of our imaginations? From what deity or demon do we receive the gift of iron thus to harden our hearts?"

BOY SCOUTS NOT NEW.

Organization Like Them Existed 2,500 Years Ago.

That the Boy Scout movement is as old as the Medes and the Persians will be a surprise to many. Yet, according to Xenophon, it was an established institution in the time of Cyrus, who lived in the sixth century before Christ, and it, as it has been suspected, the historian-philosopher of Athens sometimes took a little liberty with dates and places it may be inferred that boy scouts existed in the Greece of his own time, the fourth century before the Christian era.

In his "Cyropaedia," which is the life of the great Persian conqueror, Cyrus, Xenophon describes the programme which the Persians laid down for their youth, and the virtues for which these boys were striving twenty-five centuries ago and the manner of their striving bear an amazing resemblance to the resolutions adopted by the boy scouts of the present day.

Xenophon writes:

"The boys go to school, and spend their time in learning justice; and they say that they go there for this purpose, just as in our country they say that they go to learn to read and write. And their officers spend the greater part of the day deciding cases for them. For, as a matter of course, boys also prefer charges against one another, just as men do, of theft, robbery, assault, cheating, slander, and other things that naturally come up; and when they discover any one committing any of these crimes, they punish him."

And they punish also any one whom they find accusing another falsely. And they bring one another to trial, also charged with an offence for which people hate one another most, but to law least, namely that of ingratitude; and if they know that any one is able to return a favor and fails to do so, they punish him also severely. For they think that the ungrateful are likely to be the most neglectful of their duty toward their gods, their parents, their country, and their friends, for it seems that shamelessness goes hand in hand with ingratitude; and it is that, we know, which leads the way to every moral wrong.

Also, remarks Xenophon, the Persians teach their boys self-control and obedience to their officers among them and self-restraint in eating and drinking. "Besides this they learn to shoot and throw the spear."

And, according to Xenophon, Cyrus, when he was but a boy, became an important officer among his own group of boy scouts and was allowed to be a sort of judge.

"Why do you think that you understand justice?" his mother asked of him.

"Because," said he, "my teacher appointed me on the ground that I was thoroughly versed in justice, to decide cases for the others also. And so in one case," said he, "I once got a flogging for not deciding correctly."

"The case was like this. A big boy with a little tunic, finding a little boy with a big tunic on, took it off him and put his own tunic on him, while he himself put on the other's. So when I tried their case, I decided that it was better for them both that each should keep the tunic that fitted him.

"And thereupon the master flogged me, saying that when I was a judge of good fit, I should do as I had done, but when it was my duty to decide whose tunic it was, I had this question, he said to consider. Whose title was the rightful one: whether it was right that he took it away by force should keep it, or that he who had it made for himself or had bought it, should own it?"
