Hamilton Tigers will miss the presence of "Eddie" Smith on their backfield this season.

Toronto Globe—Roddan and Kennedy of Queen's may be found with McGill this fall.

As a guarantee of good faith in their offer to match Jess Willard against "Jack" Johnson, backers of the boxer have posted $10,000 with Bob Vernon, and have agreed to arrange the bout and pay the champion $30,000, win, lose or draw, if he will agree to enter the ring.

Ty Cobb has jumped to first place in the race in the American League for the lead in batting.

Edmonton will not have a team in the Alberta Football association this fall, but has decided to keep the game alive during the financial stringency by means of a four team city league, which will play weekly games during the gridiron season.

Senior football in the western provinces appears to be on the wane as a result of so many players having left for Valcartier to join the first Canadian contingent.

"Silver" Quilty, who last year played with Ottawa and before that with Ottawa College, has definitely announced that he will play with McGill this season.

The following editorial appears in the Calgary Albertan: A lacrosse game on Sunday! This may seem decidedly out of the ordinary, but in the opinion of the promoters it will be perfectly in accord with the present extraordinary state in which the world finds itself.

It is unthinkable that any sane person will find fault with the method of assisting the wives and children of those who are shedding their blood for the empire even while the game is in progress.

Our soldiers fight on Sunday as on any other day, so why should we sit idly by on that day without making any corresponding effort in behalf of their dependents?

This is the sound logic that prompts the lacrosse boys to offer their physical talent for sweet charity's sake.

BOY MARTYR'S DEATH

KILLED GERMAN CAPTAIN—HACKED TO PIECES.

Given Chance to Live—Condemned to Death—Finnish Tendon Made Brutal Proposal Which Brought Death to Himself.

Paris, Sept. 18.—Under the heading, "A Monster and a Hero's Death," the Matin prints a war story of youthful heroism.

"M. Paulin, a senator of the department of Cher," says the Matin, "tells how at the village of Lourdes, in Northern France, a wounded French sergeant, angered by German brutality, shot a Prussian officer.

Before being shot he was given water by a dauntless lad, Emile Depres, who thereupon also was condemned to immediate execution.

Just as the soldiers were bandaging the boy's eyes preparatory to firing, the German captain, with a cruel smile, cried cynically: "I give you your life on condition that you act as executioner for this sergeant. He asked for water; you'll give him lead."

"After a moment's hesitation the boy agreed. Seizing a rifle, he aimed at the sergeant's breast. Then, suddenly turning, he shot the sneering German, and he himself fell hacked to pieces with bayonets. His act will live in history."

DENTIST CENTURIES AGO

Teeth in Skeletons in Latin American Found Filled.

Fan American Bulletin. That the art of filling teeth with foreign substances was known to the original tribes of the Americans hundreds of years before the Columbian era, perhaps even 1,000 years ago, has been known to archaeologists for some time.

Dr. Marshall H. Saville is quoted in the Fan American Bulletin. "Another custom which we found in Esmeraldas, and which, so far as we are aware, is not present in any other part of South America, is the decoration of the teeth by the insertion of inlays in small perforations cut in the enamel of the upper incisors. This custom of decorating the teeth was quite common in various parts of Mexico, where different settings were used.

In Mayan area, as far south as Salvador, the object most often used for the inlay was jadeite.

"In Mexico, for example in Oaxaca, I have found hematite used in the inlay. Turquoise has been found and in other parts teeth with settings of rock crystal, obsidian and a red cement have been found. We have never heard of this custom in Colombia or Peru, but in Esmeraldas, in the province of Esmeraldas, in the north of Ecuador, I have found with tiny disks of gold set in to the teeth in the same manner as in Mexico and Central America, with the exception of the material."

Last summer Prof. Saville returned from another archaeological trip to South America with numerous valuable specimens, among them being one of unusual interest, described as follows:

"A Colono, one of the natives of Atacames, in the province of Esmeraldas, found a skeleton in a burial tomb. The skull was found with the teeth inlaid with gold. The upper middle teeth are decorated by the insertion of thin gold disks in cavities drilled or bored in the enamel of the face of the teeth.

"An unusual dental feat, in addition to the decoration, is found in a right middle tooth. This is not a right middle incisor, but a right lateral incisor, which does not belong to the jaw, but was implanted to replace the middle incisor. This is such an extraordinary feature that we must weigh very carefully the evidence as to its having been found in the jaw."

Indeed, there is no reason to doubt that the replacement is a genuine triumph of the ancient dentists of Atacames."

Another skull showed teeth that had been "faced-over" with gold, the enamel having been skillfully removed down to the dentine and the teeth being in a perfect state of preservation. So much for the Indian dentists of 1,000 years ago.

How Hubby Dodged It. The conversation having turned to culinary spasms, Congressman Otis Wingo, of Arkansas, was reminded of Mrs. Smith's struggle with the cook book.

Mrs. Smith was young and inexperienced, the Congressman said, but she was ambitious. So one afternoon she waded deep into the cook book and dug out an angel cake, which she placed before the old man at the evening meal.

"What's the matter with the angel cake, Harry?" asked wife, disappointedly, on noticing that he studiously avoided it. "Isn't it good enough?"

"It isn't that, dear," gently responded the old man. "I'm afraid that I am not good enough."

"Good enough for what?" queried little wife, with a puzzled expression.

"Good enough to become an angel sweetheart," softly answered hubby.—Philadelphia Telegraph.
