INTERCOLLEGIATE EXECUTIVE TO MEET IN MONTREAL.

After the Queen's Game Next Saturday and Decide Where It Will be Played Off, if One Exists.

Toronto News: We certainly are "hog town" when it comes to Rugby. Varsity, Argonauts, Toronto R. and A. A. and St. Michael's all came through in splendid style on Saturday.

Toronto World: Coach Shaughnessy is authority for the statement that McGill will not play for the Dominion championship, and after Saturday's game, everybody believes him.

It is not likely that there will be a Dominion championship played for this season, as the existing ties in the interprovincial and a probable tie in the intercollegiate and no union will carry the game too far for a Dominion final.

"Jack" Darragh is credited with the statement he will not play hockey this winter at all. There are lots of goal keepers who will wish that he keeps his word.

Toronto Globe: It wouldn't be surprising if the championships of all three football unions came to Toronto. The fact is that indications point straight in that direction at present. In that event the provincial newspapers would be justified in crying "Hogtown". Yea, verily!

Manager Frank Patrick, of the Vancouver team of the Pacific coast league, announces his retirement from active participation in hockey, and is now busily engaged hunting for a defence man to fill his place.

Of the O.R.F.U., senior game at Hamilton on Saturday The Spectator says:—"Jack" Williams and his brother "Ken" from Ottawa, were the officials, but their work was far from satisfactory to either side. There was a great deal of uncalculated rough work which escaped their eye, and the locals were responsible for the most of it.

"Harry" Cameron has signed up with Toronto again. He was out of the best defence men in the N.H.A., last season. Cameron is a Pembroke boy.

Manager "Jack" Marshall, of the Toronto denies there are any hold-outs on the Stanley cup team. He says Walker and Minnie McGillin will be with the team when the time for practice comes around.

President J. M. Hazlett of the intercollegiate union, who will be in Montreal on Saturday to play with Queen's against McGill, will call a meeting for that night, when the question of grounds will be decided should a tie exist. If Queen's win the game the meeting will be cancelled, and the championship will have been won by Varsity.

Montreal Gazette: It was not lack of condition that defeated McGill, but they underestimated their opponents as they did the Queen's team a year ago. This will not likely happen again, as the players now realize what is ahead of them. Queen's showed a good performance against both Varsity and McGill, and will be in as good condition for Saturday as in their previous matches.

An Ottawa despatch says: Efforts are being made to have the intercollegiate championship between McGill and Varsity staged at Lansdowne Park on Nov. 21st, if the anticipation of a saw-off pans out as expected. McGill and Varsity will seek neutral territory for their combat, and already the venue of this contest has narrowed down to Ottawa or Kingston, with the chances favoring the capital, where a gate of treble or four times the proportions that could be drawn in Kingston would be assured.

Montreal Gazette: Although McGill took no exception to the rulings of the officials in the match with Varsity, a mistake was made through a penalty imposed that cost the local collegians a try. When Ross Laing failed to give Carr his yards while taking a catch from Laing's punt, the ball had been kicked from back of the McGill line. The penalty set down for this is a free kick on the five yard line, while the referee gave Varsity possession of the ball and a down two yards out from the line, which was the means of Varsity securing their only try. This put Varsity in the lead and accounted for the disorganization of the McGill team. Had Varsity been given only a free kick it is not likely they would have scored the try.

New Conditions In Canada. Daily Courier, Toronto. Canada is slowly but surely adjusting herself to new conditions. We are learning the penalties of being a creditor nation and of being content to live upon borrowed capital. The necessity of being economically self-contained is being borne in upon us in a sense of which the protectionists have never conceived. As the individual has learned to keep himself in such a financial position that he can live comfortably through a financial depression or a period of unemployment, so Canada must learn how to live as a nation when the international gates are closed. Canada was buying too much abroad, on the theory that if anything could be bought more cheaply from other nations than it could be made at home, it was good business to do so. While Canada may not adopt a higher protection tariff, the policy of the nation will hereafter be to encourage the making at home of all articles vital to our daily existence.

Look For Secret Radio Office. Jackman, Maine, Nov. 11.—A Canadian secret service agent has left here for the neighborhood of Martine's Pond, 14 miles distant, where it is believed a secret German radio station is located on a big estate about which curious rumors have been in circulation recently. The detective has authority from Governor Haines to search the estate and surrounding country. The British vice-consul at Boston is also expected to arrive here and take part in the hunt.

In connection with Toronto's application for an order compelling the railway company to build 200 new cars, the municipal board ordered the company to build 50 new double truck motors, to be built and in operation by June 1st, 1915.

STORY OF AN AIR DUEL.

Wounded Artillery Man Tells How German Was Brought Down. Paris, Nov. 11.—The Intransigent prints an account of an air duel from the lips of a wounded artillery man. He says: "My battery was crossing an open plain when the humming of an aeroplane motor, like the noise of a huge fly, was heard above. Instantly everyone stiffened and was silent. Someone whispered: "I recognize the Boche motor. It is certainly a German biplane."

CANADA'S WINTER PORTS

Special Precautions to Secure Safe Navigation. Ottawa, Nov. 11.—On account of the important part the ports of Halifax and St. John will play this winter in connection with Canada's military activities, special precautions are being taken by the Marine Department to ensure safety of navigation at these points. J. G. McPhail, commission of lights, leaves for Halifax to-day to see that lights, buoys and other navigation aids at the winter ports are kept in proper order. This work is generally left to the department's agent at Halifax, but it is decided to take special precautions this season.

MANY TONS OF BLANKETS

Have Been Made In Canada For French Soldiers. Ottawa, Nov. 11.—Canada is supplying equipment of one kind or another for all the allies in the European war theatre — shirts and saddles for the British, saddles for the Russians and blankets for the French. Information with regard to latter was obtained to-day. Factories all over Canada have been turning out blankets for the French army in preparation for the winter campaign and these blankets are now being assembled in Montreal for shipment to France. The order was a large one and when all the blankets have arrived for shipment there will be several hundred tons. Practically all the flour given to Great Britain by Canada is now in the United Kingdom, having been landed at various ports designated by the imperial government.

Soldiers' Claims To Be Protected. Ottawa, Nov. 11.—An order-in-council has been passed allowing holders of mining rights in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, the North-west Territories, the Yukon, and part of the British Columbia, who have gone to the front to hold their claims free from the risk of cancellation owing to failure to comply with the mining regulations prescribing the amount of work to be done on such claims.

Crown Prince Didn't Deliver Goods. London, Nov. 11.—Telegraphing from Copenhagen yesterday, W. Duckworth, special correspondent of the Telegraph, says: "A neutral subject, who has just returned after a week's stay in Berlin says the crown prince is being blamed for the failure of the Germans' advance in France. The people had put their trust in him to reach Paris within the scheduled time."

Lieutenant-Colonel L. W. Stotesbury, inspector-general of the first brigade of the New York National Guard, will almost certainly be made adjutant-general when Charles S. Whitman takes office as governor. It takes a woman to love a man because he doesn't deserve it.

POSITION OF PRUSSIA

WHERE COSSACKS BIVOUACK IN KAISER'S STABLES. Czar's Army Adopting Itself to Winter Campaign, and Men Do Not Suffer From Cold. Petrograd, Nov. 11.—Twenty miles from Insterburg and less than seventy miles from Posen, that is the position in which the Russian forces in East Prussia stand. This is the new phase of the war which has followed the general German retreat to the Austrian border. The last units of Gen. Hindenburg's army were driven from the Rynin district, where they took refuge in retreat near Thorn. Once more Spallpoenen is in General Rennenkampf's hands, and Cossacks are bivouacking in the royal stables at Trakebren, where kaiser has his famous breeding establishment.

No private person in Prussia suffers more than the kaiser from the Russian advance. His great hunting estate at Rominten, with its collection of European deer in the park, has twice been a battlefield. It has been found necessary to cut down all the trees, and the troops helped themselves liberally to the game.

Since the taking of Bakalargewo and Schirwidit, fighting on the east Prussian front has been less severe. The earlier successes of the Russians resulted in the losses of the Germans being so heavy that the latter were not in a position to continue effective resistance. For the moment, the Königsberg garrison, which had been heavily drawn upon for the attack on Bakalargewo, was unable to afford more men, and the only substantial German reinforcements received was a division of cavalry from the Kalisz district which had been recently withdrawn from Belgium.

The armies now operating against the Russians are said to be commanded as follows: The Austrian army on the Saz by General Dankl, the German main army in Poland, by the crown prince, and the German army on the left flank and east Prussia, by Gen. von Hindenburg. The last named on three occasions attempted to communicate with the Russian commanders by means of a white flag, but each time the overtures were refused, and the enemy were informed that such a mission in future would not be respected. The roads on the eastern front are deep in snow. Part of the Russian transport already consists of sledges. In fact, the czar's army is adopting itself to a winter campaign in the smallest detail and the men are not suffering from the cold.

KAISER LIVES IN TRAIN

He Is Guarded By A Picked Body Of Germans. Emperor William is virtually living in his railroad train, in which he is continually on the move, between his armies in the east, that are operating against Russia, and those in the west, that are engaged in fighting the French, the English and the Belgians. This train consists of 10 cars, and a considerable amount of comment has been created by the fact that they all have large red crosses painted on their roofs, with the object of conveying the impression to hostile aviators, that they form part of an ambulance train, and to thus deter the aviators in question from hurling down upon them any explosive bombs.

Those responsible for the personal safety of the Kaiser, seem to be particularly apprehensive of danger to his life from aerial attack, and at those chateaux in France and in Russian Poland where he has made brief sojourns, and even in his own domains as, for instance, at Coblenz, the roofs of his quarters have been thickly covered with sand bags, so as to protect him from the bombs of aviators.

His personal safety is watched over by his suite, a picked body of the Garde du Corps regiments, and a large staff of detectives, known as imperial field police, and great care is taken to conceal his movements and plans, and to prevent them from becoming known. The reason for this is the absolute confusion and chaos which would ensue in Germany were he to be killed, or even to be seriously wounded, while the present war is in progress.

There's no fun trying to do the new dances — the Fox Trot, Maxixe, One Step, Hesitation, Boston, Three Step—to the jerky drumming of a piano. There's no tempting tempo. But when the National Promenade Band swings into the seductive "La Bella Argentina" or "Waltz Hesitation", and The new EDISON PHONOGRAPH (THE INSTRUMENT WITH THE DIAMOND POINT) reproduces the full, rich melody—the sway and swing of it—the fascinating rhythm of it—then you have something worth dancing to. There are other special Dance Records available to owners of Edison Phonographs — several hundred other Band and Orchestra records, many of which are suitable for the new dances — and any number of Tango songs like "Underneath The Tango Moon."
