

GERMANY'S SOCIALISTS UNABLE TO PERSUADE THEIR BRETHREN OF BELGIUM

To Accept German Occupation—Told Belgians That Germany Was Getting Supplies Under the Nose of England.

Amsterdam, Nov. 11.—The friendly attitude of German socialists towards the Kaiser's aggressive war policy is being revealed more and more as time goes on. Already it is known that German socialists conveyed their government peace overtures to France, and now I am in a position to give you more particulars of their war-like activity.

Four leaders of the German socialist party recently have been in Belgium to try to persuade the Belgian socialist leaders to enter Belgian workingmen to settle down quietly and with contentment under German occupation.

The German socialists did their utmost to convince leaders of the Belgian labor movement for Belgian workingmen to accept German occupation and live their normal lives than to continue to offer any opposition. They assured their Belgian compatriots that the war was extremely popular among all classes of the population of Germany owing to the "unjust aggression of Germany's enemies" and to the horror inspired by the thought that "liberal-minded and cultured Germany could fall under the savage yoke of barbarous Russia."

In any case they added, the war was now well under way and nothing could prevent it from ending in a complete triumph for Germany.

Therefore, the sooner the Belgian laboring classes accept the inevitable the better it would be for them. France, said the German socialists, could do nothing to help, and as for England, her army did not count as a continental factor. They admitted that in regard to the British fleet it was different, but even the British navy could not and never would prevent Germany from getting all the supplies which she needed.

Besides, concluded the socialist emissaries from Germany, England was so stupidly scrupulous in respect to the rights of neutrals that Germany would bring in England's ally and all she wanted under England's nose. When the Belgian socialists reproached the emissaries for the suffering inflicted by German troops on the civilian population of Belgium, the socialists from Berlin warmly defended the severe measures which the German soldiers had been compelled to take to protect themselves from the "treacherous attacks" of Belgian civilians. It appears that some heated discussion ensued between the German and Belgian socialists.

The Germans tried to persuade the Belgians that they had been duped and deceived by King Albert into taking sides in a quarrel with which the Belgian people themselves had no concern whatever.

Again and again they persisted in their endeavor to shake the resolution of the Belgian labor leaders to maintain their attitude of cold hostility to the invader.

GIRLS! HAVE BEAUTIFUL, LUSTROUS, FLUFFY HAIR--25 CENT DANDERINE

No more dandruff or falling hair--A real surprise awaits you.

To be possessed of a head of heavy beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now--all drug stores recommend it--apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre and in you as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair--fine and downy at first--yes--but really new hair--sprouting out all over your scalp--Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; it destroys dandruff and cures for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair--taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments--a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

WINTER ADDS TO HORRORS What Has Been Done in Past Was During Rigorous Season.

Within the next two months a new factor will have entered the European war--the cold of winter--which the field armies will find more persistent, a more formidable enemy than the troops of opposing nations. The first advance of winter has been felt ready by the soldiers intrenched along the River Aisne. Chilly winds, following a wet week, sent a shiver through the lines of both forces.

More than anything else, says the Kansas City Star, the weather will hamper the mobility of the armies. Their already heavily taxed transport trains will have the added burden of winter supplies. Troops will not be able to cut loose for brief periods of winter, even for their advanced bases, unless provided with shelter and warmth will have to be provided at each stop of a marching force, no easy task when millions are on the battle lines.

Undoubtedly the general staffs of both sides have elaborate preparations made to keep the suffering necessarily caused by the winter at a minimum; but the greatest of human endeavor cannot eliminate all hardships, even if an army is given a permanent station and no movement made until spring.

Whether the science of war has progressed to the point where winter can be disregarded in a measure, is yet an undetermined factor. In almost all the wars since history began, the coming of frost has heralded a period of decreasing activity for the field armies, while winter has forced generals to establish permanent camps and wait for warmer weather before any extensive operations are started.

Washington has one brilliant success in the Revolutionary War by disregarding the extreme hardships of winter and attacking the Hessians at Trenton. His army remained that year, but weeks after Christmas inactivity. The suffering was forced into inactivity. The suffering at Valley Forge show the formidable enemy winter can be.

In the Crimean war, fighting practically stopped during the Battle of Inkerman, November 5th, 1854. The Russians retired into Sebastopol and the allies built a permanent camp of investment around it.

Sherman's march was made in the winter months of the allies, caused a rush to the Southern climate, the suffering in cold among his troops was intense. Grant campaigned against Fort Henry and Fort Donelson in February, 1862, and following winter was active in Mississippi.

In modern wars winter has not caused a cessation of hostilities, but it has diminished operations. The Japanese advance on Mukden in 1904 was halted about the first of September by severe cold. Neither army was prepared to withstand winter, so for a month the fighting forces lay inactive almost within striking distance. When engagements were fought in October, then operations practically halted until February 19, when the Japanese army swathed in overcoats and padded leggings, began to advance.

The investment of the city was less affected by cold weather than the operations of field armies. The reason is obvious. Investing armies can build permanent earth huts, where a small fire and the bodily warmth of a squad of men will keep them nearly as comfortable as in their own homes. The Japanese assault on 203-Meter Hill was made on November 20. Fort Arthur capitulated after a series of assaults January 2, 1905.

The war between the Balkan allies and Turkey, contrary to usual custom, began in the fall. Most all wars have been inaugurated in the spring or summer. The troops of Bulgaria, Serbia, Greece and Montenegro started to war with complete winter kits, heavy overcoats, thick blankets, and shelter.

The fighting in Northern Thrace during October was a trying period on the Bulgarian invaders. Their descent on Turkey, almost as rapid as Germany's on Paris, carried the troops into new night. They rapidly became expert in constructing wind shelters and huts in which bodily warmth took the place of furnaces.

The soldiers besieging Adrianople and also the field armies when they reached the Khatalla lines near Constantinople, constructed lean-to huts, thatched with reeds and straw. Rolls of thick blanketing were wrapped around the legs of men on duty. Caps were pulled down over the ears. None of the armies now in the field, except the Russians and Belgians, probably have head-dresses that will afford adequate protection for the winter. All probably will be able to withstand the cold fairly well until the first of the year, where winter will begin to make inroads unless protection is given.

TOLD IN SALISBURY CAMP. The Episodes of a Young Canadian Trooper.

"Hats off to the English," remarked the private who fell out when his battalion marched from ship at Devonport to entrain for Salisbury Plain, when joined his section on the rain-soaked parade ground three days later.

"I was broke; hadn't a cent to my name when four girls spoke to me at the corner of a street. They asked me for a Canadian coin as a souvenir, and I gave them the last button on my tunic, and told them I'd neither Canadian or English money. I also told them I'd lost my battalion and those girls hired an automobile--not a common taxi, but a high-class automobile--and took me home to their mother.

"They gave me the best room in the house, and real old-fashioned English ham and eggs, with a wonderful lot of tea at breakfast in the morning, and everyone of them--including the old lady--kissed me 'good-bye' when leaving.

"I met a dog, many stragglers like myself that day, and it was nighttime when I asked a man the way to the station.

"He told me which car to take--and I told him I'd have to walk it. I wasn't sure, but I took it, and I walked with me to the station. There I saw an officer, a captain, I think he was, with more Canadian troops, entraining for Salisbury Plain."

"I addressed him as colonel, and he passed me onto the train. The women on the platform gave me tobacco, cigarettes, apples and matches, and it was while I was stowing them away in my pockets, for a half crown and card bearing the name and address of the man who showed me the way to the station. He'd slipped it into my pocket while we were walking, but I'll send one back to him the first pay. But you sure must take your hat off to the English."

And his tent mates did, for that night they feasted famously on luxuries purchased by that most ostentatiously bestrode half crown, for six cents may buy much good foodstuff in one of the wonderfully managed low-priced English army canteens. W. E. T.

Montreal Herald's Funny Man Takes A Rap at Kingston--Intermediate Intercollegiate Championship Game.

Montreal Herald: Dark thought for the day. Spending a day in Kingston, if the Intercollegiate play-off takes place there.

Toronto Mail-Empire: Queen's, Ottawa and Ottawa St. Patrick's are three senior teams that have not won a game this season, and moreover they do not look as if they would win a league fixture.

McGill contemplates switching its team around, moving Quilty out to flying wing, putting Woolait on the back division, and using Jeffrey at Charlie White, while strong efforts are being made to get Lemay into the game again.

"News" Lalonde, the speedy hockey player, is now the property of the Canadians. Manager George Kennedy of the Canadians has announced that he has completed a trade with the Patricks, whereby Didier Pitre goes to the Pacific coast league in exchange for Lalonde.

Ottawa Free Press: Outside of McGill we have nothing left in the football line in the east at all. It has been a black season down this way.

Receipts of the Ten round contest between "Freddie" Welsh, lightweight champion of the world, and Charlie White, of Chicago, at Milwaukee were $24,000.

It is doubtful if Ottawa and the St. Patrick's will play off for the city championship this season, as Captain "Jack" Williams remarked Saturday in Hamilton that his club had a very bad season last year, but he would hate to arrange a game which by the Ottawa club got any benefit out of it.

The final game for the Intermediate championship of the Intercollegiate union will be played in Toronto on Friday afternoon at University of Toronto Stadium, instead of on Saturday in Hamilton as originally planned to play the return game with St. Michael's college. The Saints had a hard fight at Montreal last Saturday to win by two points.

An Ottawa dispatch says: Unless the Intercollegiate teams make a big concession the anticipated Intercollegiate saw-off between McGill and Varsity will not be staged here on Nov. 21st. Kingston is the only alternative. The Ottawa H. I. teams claim the grounds on Nov. 21st for the O.R.F.U. final with Westmount. The Big Four club wants to meet St. Patrick's on that date for the city championship. The McGill management has made application for Lansdowne Park on Nov. 21st in case the champions are successful against Queen's on Saturday and Varsity agrees to play here.
