

HER BEAUTIFUL SKIN

Every Woman, Who Wishes Those Charms of Purity and Freshness of Complexion, Should Be a Regular User of Fruit Juices in The Form of "Fruit-a-tives".

A CLEAN SKIN MEANS A CLEAN BODY

If You Are Not Satisfied With Your Complexion, Improve It With "Fruit-a-tives".

SINCE the days of Cleopatra, a soft, clean, rosetinted skin has meant beauty. It does today; yet beautiful complexions are noticeable because of their rarity. A smooth, glowing skin may be had by every woman, who will use a little care and take "Fruit-a-tives".

Pimples, blotches, blackheads and other blemishes are the results of faulty skin action. Everywhere—all over the body—the little pores of the skin should be busy carrying away the various poisons and impurities formed in the body. Nature delegates this work to the kidneys, bowels, lungs and skin. If, therefore, the pores of the skin become clogged, or if the other organs do not do their work properly, the action of the skin is impeded and disfigurement follows.

"Fruit-a-tives"—made from fruit juices—acts directly on bowels, kidneys, liver and skin. It tones up all these organs, enabling them to do their work properly and at the same time, induces vigorous skin action, and opens up the pores of the skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is nature's beauty doctor—and every woman who takes "Fruit-a-tives" will find a great improvement, not only in her complexion, but also in her general health.

Price, a bottle for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

An Easy Way To Stop Head Noises

Good Advice For Those Who Fear Headaches.
Men and women who are growing hard of hearing and who experience a steady feeling of pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by buzzing, rumbling sounds in their head like water falling, or steam escaping, should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble. Head noises are almost invariably the forerunners of complete or partial deafness and most deaf people suffer from them constantly. Sometimes these head noises become so distracting and nerve racking with their never ceasing "hum" they drive the sufferer almost frantic and complete nervous breakdown and even violent insanity have been known to result.
Thanks to a remarkable scientific discovery made recently in England it is now possible to almost instantly lessen the severity of these headaches and in a very short time to completely and permanently overcome them. With the disappearance of the head noises, the hearing also greatly improves and very frequently can be restored to normal. This English treatment is known as Parmitin and can be easily and safely administered at home. Leading druggists in Kingston and vicinity now have it in stock. Get from your druggist 1 oz. Parmitin (Double Strength) and mix it at home with 1-4 pint of hot water and a oz. of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and then take one tablespoonful four times daily until the noises disappear and hearing improves. Parmitin is used double strength in this way not only to reduce, by tonic action, the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tube and thus to equalize the air pressure of the drum but to correct any excessive secretions in the middle ear and the results it gives are both remarkably quick and effective.
Important—In ordering Parmitin always specify that you want double strength. Your druggist has it or he can get it for you. But send the to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antonio, Montreal, P.Q., who make a specialty of it.

LIFE OF JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN

By Viscount Milner. J. A. Spender, Sir Henry Lucy, J. Ramsay MacDonald, Harold Cox and L. S. Amery. Thomas Nelson & Sons, Publishers, Toronto.
The story of one of the most striking political careers of our day is told in this compact little book. Moreover, it provides a series of studies from different standpoints of the achievement of one of the empire's great sons. Various contributors have united to produce this volume which deals succinctly with the career of a man who underwent many changes of attitude. Mr. Spender writes of his career as a Liberal; Sir Henry Lucy describes Mr. Chamberlain's part in the Home Rule struggle under Gladstone; Ramsay MacDonald deals with his social policy as understood by the labor party; Harold Cox and L. S. Amery describe his beloved tariff reform propaganda; while Lord Milner speaks of his work as an empire builder. The recent death of this strong-minded and eminent statesman will lead many to desire a closer acquaintance with his life and his ideals. To such, this book will prove very useful.

TARZAN OF THE APES

By Edgar Rice Burroughs. McClelland, Goodchild & Stewart, Toronto, Publisher. 401 pages. Price, $1.30.
A weird, impossible, yet fascinating story of ape and man life in the jungle is here unfolded. A short synopsis of the plot must suffice. As the result of a mutiny aboard ship, an English jobber and his wife are marooned in a jungle inhabited by anthropoid apes. Here a child is born; a year later the mother dies. A great ape kills the father, but the baby boy is adopted by a female ape whose own child had just been killed by a fall. This subsequent adventure of Tarzan, as the boy is named by the tribe, makes a story of many marvels. An ape in his ability and his prowess, heredity asserts itself; the boy tries to clothe himself, and, without ever having heard any save the ape language, without any conception of the sound of English, he teaches himself to read and write from books found in his father's cabin. With adventures, and perils the book is replete; not a strange love story wanting. It closes with a great renunciation, but with the promise of another Tarzan book, which leads the reader to hope the renunciation was not final. Mr. Burroughs has told this impossible story well, and there are few who will not look forward eagerly to the promised sequel.

GILLESPIE

By J. Macdougall Hay. McClelland, Goodchild & Stewart, Toronto, Publishers. 619 pages. Price, $1.40. R. Uglew & Co., City.
"Gillespie" is a remarkable novel, and will undoubtedly be ranked as one of the greatest books of the season. The fact that it is the author's first book makes it more notable still. It is given to few writers to win success and fame with their first effort. The book has some slight faults, which are to be expected in a new author. The style is sometimes too leisurely, there is occasionally unnecessary repetition, and the gruesomeness and horror are at times too exaggerated. The characters, however, are intensely real, and the descriptions unusually faithful. The author's creative power is undeniable. He makes one see the little town of the wild sea shore, as if dotted hills close by.
The scene of the story is laid in a small Scottish fishing village, where Gillespie Strang was born. Upon his parents' house lay an ancient curse—the knowledge of which was carefully hid from Gillespie, but fate ordained that through him would the doom be wrought. Gillespie is the chief character in the book. He is greedy, unscrupulous, hard, but for a time successfully hides his real character behind a smiling face and a hearty, joyous manner. He comes to dominate the village, but all the while getting a tighter grip upon its people. Power and prosperity are his, and he uses them for his own selfish purposes. When he is thwarted, he seeks vengeance, it recoils upon them and Gillespie escapes unharmed. The girl he married for her "pickle sillar" has her soul bothered to death. But vengeance awaits its proper time, in the person of Gillespie's widow—the Galbraith whom Strang had robbed of home and living. As ruthless as Gillespie himself, she goes about her deliberate and deadly task, reaching Gillespie through his wife, whose very soul she drags in the mire. Next he sees his favorite nephew, Euan, turn against him, and is obliged to witness his suffering and crucifixion. His mother's degradation breaks the boy's sensitive heart, and the tale of his sufferings and remorse take up considerable of the latter part of the book.
Then there is another character that stands out fine and noble amid the sordidness of the scene—that of Toppail Janet, the loving, loyal old servant. Her simple goodness and her devotion to her mistress, are touchingly pictured. It is a character faithfully and finely drawn.
The story ends in an unspeakably terrible climax, and the doom pronounced by destiny is achieved. And is this not the truth, the sure desire to improve upon—that man cannot escape his destiny? Throughout the book, in sunshine or in storm, in success or in defeat, an impending fate is sensed. Ever the shadow of doom is over all.
"Gillespie" is a strong vital story of a life given to greed, and the consequences thereof. It is a work that all lovers of books should read.

JEHANE OF THE FOREST

By L. A. Talbot McClelland, Goodchild & Stewart, Toronto, Publishers. 315 pages.
Here is a story of medieval romance, which may be pronounced "splendid" by young ladies who dream of the fine, brave knights and the stately castles of old, but we fear the adult mind will find in the volume little to praise. The story relates a romance between a Norman baron and a Saxon maid, daughter of a forest keeper, in the days of Henry II. There are many thrilling adventures recorded, and one feels that the author must have gone to considerable trouble to read up the period. The tale is told in the archaic form of the English Chronicle, and there are many words and expressions that the average reader never saw before—and will doubtless hope never to meet again. Carefulness in writing marks the author's work throughout.

PLAYING WITH FIRE

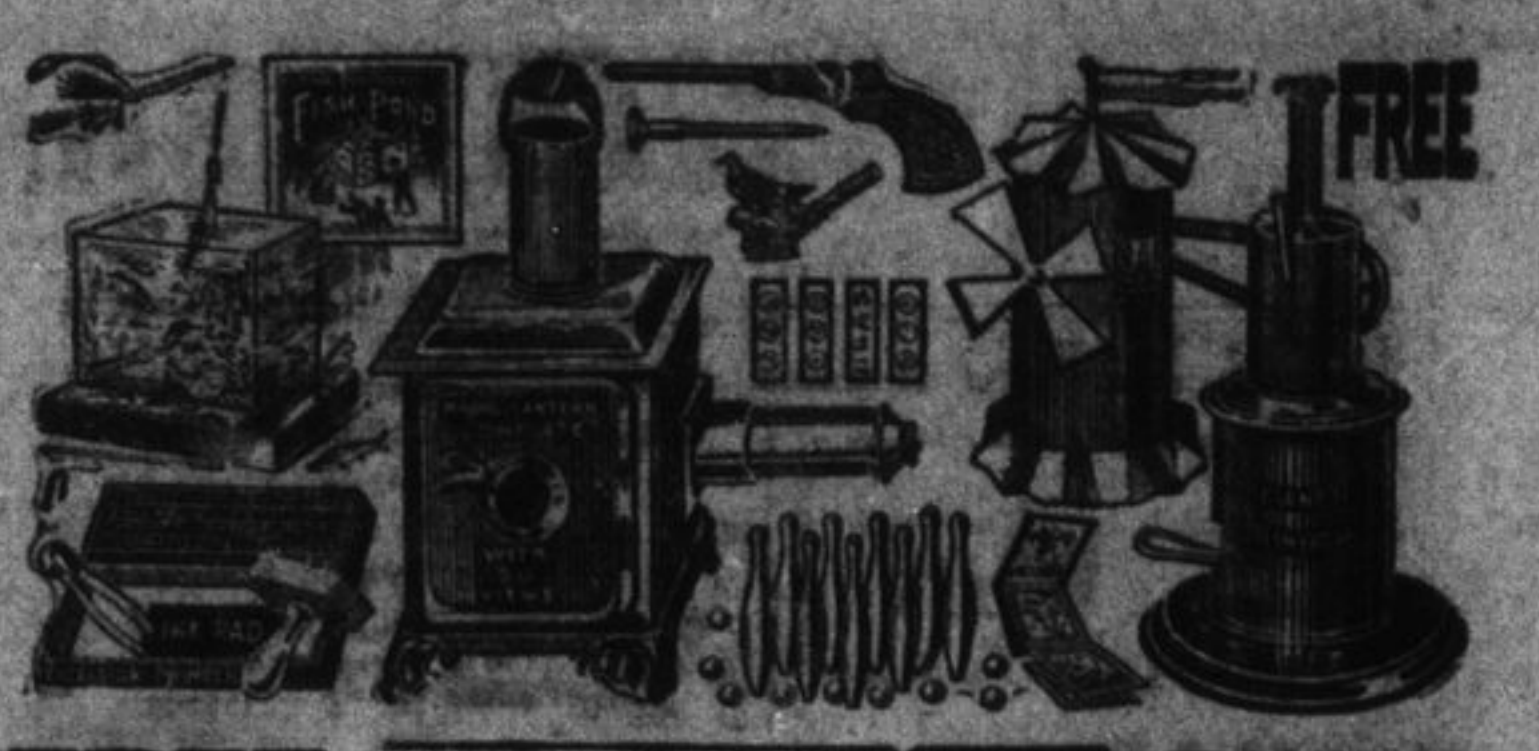

By Amelia E. Barr. William Briggs, Toronto, Publisher. 326 pages. Price, $1.35. Illustrated.
The fact that Mrs. Barr has recently passed her eightieth year has not deterred her from writing another very fine book, dealing with a man's struggle with his conscience; a battle between faith and doubt. It is a story of religious justification. In Macrea, a stern Calvinist preacher, has built up an enormous congregation through strong religious conviction. He becomes interested, however, in a number of new books on free thought and modern philosophy, and gradually his religious faith becomes undermined. His estrangement from his family, his withdrawal from his sacred duty, his effort to find the God he has lost, make up a vigorous, timely novel, which in many particulars bears a resemblance to Churchill's recent success, "The Ends of the Earth." The book ends with a high note of happiness and justification.

WITH THE BEST INTENTION

By Bruno Lessing. McClelland, Goodchild & Stewart, Toronto, Publishers. 348 pages. R. Uglew & Co., City.
If you are searching for just the right kind of book to take on your vacation trip, here it is. Its reading aloud around the camp-fire will provide universal merriment, while it will prove a splendid companion for a lonely hour. The book is well adapted for outing purposes, as each chapter or story, while bearing a relation to all the others, is nevertheless complete in itself.
Lessing knows the New York Ghetto as Kipling knows India. He has made Lapidowitz, the Jewish schnorrer, a most entertaining rascal. A schnorrer, explains the author, "is a Jewish community who lives by his wits, never works if he can help it, knows every line of the Torah and Talmud that can possibly be used as an appeal for charity, eats, drinks, wears and smokes anything that is given to him and is usually quite amiable."
The ingenious schemes Lapidowitz conceals for raising money to pay his debts are very amusingly told. Some of the stories are especially good, notably the schnorrer's experience with the Bronx widow who wanted a second husband, and "Bambie's night off." If you enjoy a good laugh, be sure and get this book.

MIDSTREAM

By Will Levinston Comfort. S. B. Gundy, Toronto, Publisher. 314 pages. Price, $1.25.
"Midstream" is the story of an American boy of poor family, from his early youth up to the age of thirty. It is a story of a boy who seeks vengeance, it recoils upon them and Gillespie escapes unharmed. The girl he married for her "pickle sillar" has her soul bothered to death. But vengeance awaits its proper time, in the person of Gillespie's widow—the Galbraith whom Strang had robbed of home and living. "Gillespie" is a strong vital story of a life given to greed, and the consequences thereof. It is a work that all lovers of books should read.

Not many styles will come from Paris this year. France is in the grip of war. The shops of the great modistes and milliners are closed. Every year we send millions of dollars, to France, and elsewhere, for feathers, dowers, hats, gowns, jewelry, silks, etc., for feminine adornment. Yet these things are produced in Canada. Canadian artisans and Canadian workpeople are creating and producing dainty frills and furbelows that are hard to beat. It remains for Canadian women to buy them. The mere fact of an article being imported gives it no added value. On the contrary it should be a reproach at a time like this when Canadian industries need your support. These things are made in Canada, of good material and good workmanship, and they're being sold at prices that discount imported articles every time. It's a splendid thing to knit socks and Balaklava caps for soldiers, but you will be showing yourself strangely inconsistent if you pass up the work of your fellow Canadian women for something that foreign women have turned out.
