FIFTY-FIVE INVASIONS ON SHORES OF ENGLAND

Attempts Against British Soil, Recounted by historians, Date Back to Time of Julius Caesar, B.C. 55.

Fifty-five invasions of Great Britain and Ireland are reported by historians.

From the first invasion of Britain by Julius Caesar until to-day when the German squadron raided towns on the north-east coast of England, there have been fifty-five attempts to invade Great Britain and Ireland. Many of these dates are by-words with the average school boy. Some of the more important invasions are listed as follows:

- B.C. 55—First invasion by Julius Caesar.
B.C. 54—Second invasion by Julius Caesar.
A.D. 360—Invasion by Picts and Scots.
A.D. 449—Anglo-Saxon first attack.
A.D. 495—Great Saxon invasion.
A.D. 1017—Canute ends Danish invasion in triumph as king.
A.D. 1036—William the Conqueror.
A.D. 1067—Dutch fleet in the Thames—running out of ammunition the ships fire chesses.

1777—On November 1st, John Paul Jones sailed from Portsmouth, N.H., to worry British commerce. He seized the port of White Haven, burned ships and spiked guns. One of his crew seized the plate of the Earl of Selkirk. Later Jones purchased it and restored it. For two years, Jones hovered about the coast preying upon British men of war and commerce.

1795—A small French force landed in Pembrokeshire and was captured.
