THE GENIAL MANAGER

WAS WAITED ON BY THE STAFF AT MENDELL'S And Presented With a Handsome Gold Tie Pin—T. J. O'Connor Was Greatly Pleased—Other Presentations.

A pleasant event took place at Mendell's, the exclusive ladies' ready-to-wear store, at the close of business on Christmas eve, when the staff waited upon the genial manager, T. J. O'Connor, and presented him with a handsome gold tie pin, set with pearls. In returning thanks Mr. O'Connor had the pleasure of informing his clerks that the big sale just finished was by far the most successful in the history of the store. In spite of present conditions, and the cry of hard-times, he was happy to say that the store of Mendell's had the best December in its history. He did not take credit for this to himself, but attributed it to the loyalty and untiring efforts of his staff. Mr. O'Connor also paid a kindly tribute to the power and success of Whig advertising, which he declared had brought him splendid returns, and had contributed in a large measure to the success of the year.

Made Presentations. Roderick McDonald, retiring from the penitentiary staff, was presented with a pocket watch and chain by his brother officers, who at the same time presented William Bourke, also retiring, with a purse of gold. Both gifts were accompanied by addresses which bespoke the esteem in which both men were held by their fellow-officers.

ANOTHER SHAM NAPOLEON Even Pasha Claimed as Vain Fool By Intimates As there seems to be a tendency in some quarters to regard Nazir Pasha as a "strong man," capable of successfully moulding the destinies of an empire. It is interesting to read what M. Andre Duboseq has to say in the Temps of Paris of "Ever's" real personality. M. Duboseq has known him for some years, and has often laughed at the idea of his being considered an able organizer, a politician of talent, or even a good speaker. Ever Pasha is certainly handy with the revolver, and assassinated with it Nazir Pasha, but in other respects he is simply a vain fool who has been called by those intimate with him "a café concierge." The Germans could not have found an easier man to dup, but in regard to intrinsic merit he will be of no value whatever to them. He is the very last man whose appeal to Islam for a holy war would be successful. Moslems know him too well.
