THE DARING AIR FEATS OF FRENCH AVIATORS OVER THE ENEMY'S LINES
Pegoud, First Loop-the-Looper, Is Hero of Thrilling Exploits—Ammunition Blown Up.
Paris, Jan. 28.—The heroism of French aviators will make a thrilling chapter of the adventurous life you people know the names of those men who fly over Paris in search of hostile aircraft, or of those who along the whole line of the front, reconnoitre the enemy's position and locate his batteries? The spell of secrecy may now, however, be broken in favor of Pegoud, the famous aviator, who was the first to loop the loop.
Pegoud has lost none of his accuracy since the beginning of the war, and has done many gallant and reckless things over the battle fields in France. One of the latest adventures was rewarded with great success. Provided with a new machine which he wished to try, he loaded it with a dozen bombs and set out for the enemy's line. In previous reconnoitring, he had made note of the German ammunition stores assembled on a certain plot of ground. To this spot it was that he steered his way, flying very high and taking advantage of a mist, so that he should not be observed.
When he was near his goal, he hovered above the place, and descending lower, dropped nine of the bombs. The effect was prodigious. Explosion after explosion rent the air, so that his machine was shaken by the vibration waves.
Pegoud flew away, elated at his success. Still he had three bombs left, and swooping like a bird at play, he flung them over the heads of a company of German soldiers. They scattered them in all directions, and Pegoud flew on through the darkened sky like a winged dove.
His latest achievement was directed a few days ago against a captive airship from which the fire of German batteries was directed. Flying at a great height, and making a wide detour behind a wall of clouds, Pegoud then flew straight at the sausage shaped balloon. He was seen at once, and shots were fired at him wildly. He heard the shouts of the soldiers and hoarse commands. Little figures were running about like ants down there, and the balloon was hastily drawn earthward, but it was too late.
Pegoud swooped in one of the magnificent airplanes which used to thrill me when I saw them over English soil. When he saw less than fifty yards above the airship, he flung his bomb. A fearful explosion followed, making a gale of air-currents in which the French aeroplane rocked like quivering flames. The ball of gas was rent, and the German airship collapsed to the earth.

A Mystery Solved.
An Englishman, serving his country as attaché to the British embassy at Washington, says that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, has more than once been sought out by persons desirous of consulting him about thefts.
To a woman Sir Arthur one day good naturedly, and facetiously said: "detective powers are quite at your service."
"Frequent and mysterious thefts," said the woman, "have been occurring at my house for a long time. Thus there disappeared last week a motor horn, a broom, a box of golf balls, a left riding boot, a dictionary, and a half dozen tin pie plates."
"The case is perfectly clear," said Sir Arthur, "you keep a goat."

"Doctor" Jellicoe.
When Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons that the health of the sailors was nearly twice as good as in times of peace he raised a cheer and a laugh. He might have added that "Doctor" Jellicoe was very largely responsible for this happy state of affairs, for certainly no commander-in-chief has ever more jealously watched over his men than the present commander-in-chief of the grand fleet. His first care is food supply, second clothes, and third recreation; and Lady Jellicoe seems to be acting as a remarkably energetic member of his staff on shore to see that he gets all he wants in the way of comforts for his "chickens."

Sudden Action.
"What is your most valued possession, Miss Sharpe?"

COSTIVE BOWELS, HEADACHE, COLDS, TAKE CASCARETS
No Headache, Sour Stomach, Bad Cold or Constipation by morning.
Get a 10-cent box now.
Furred Tongue, Bad Colds, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

BRITISH SHIPS ENGAGED IN NORTH SEA FIGHT.
THE INDOMITABLE
WAR ON COMMERCE.
Great Britain Destroys Germany's Foreign Trade.
New York Journal of Commerce.
England's first effort when war fairly opened was to drive approximately $5,000,000,000 of German commerce from the ocean. In this she has fairly succeeded, for the German flag is now not to be seen. It may be estimated that about 3,000,000 net tons have disappeared, some of it forever, much to reappear only under foreign flags, and only a limited part, probably in the old capacity. Such action has followed traditional lines, for this type of treatment of enemy vessels and cargoes is the staple of war itself and is sanctioned by international law and custom. Before the war England controlled all important cable lines.
The next step in the process whereby England has sought to limit trade between neutral nations on the one hand and Germany on the other has likewise some sanction, but has been carried to an unprecedented height. The extension of the list of contraband articles, the use of drastic methods to prevent Germany from receiving the raw materials required for war and her industries, is defended on the ground that it is a part of the slow process of attrition whereby England hopes to wear out her enemy's strength and force him to the wall. Whether or not it is only this in intent, however, the final result will be the same, since the effect must necessarily be that of impeding or suspending industrial progress, enforcing more or less permanent loss of markets, destroying credit and otherwise demoralizing, more and more of the complex and delicate machinery of modern trade which Germany had skillfully and slowly developed. That this is perhaps an object in itself is indicated by the application of severe administrative measures designed to prevent English capital from being used to finance operations that might ultimately aid Germany or her people. It is not long since English bankers received directions not to discount bills drawn to finance operations resulting in the exportation of American metals and metal products; and other instances of similar policies might be cited.
England is now carrying this system of economic warfare still further. Not only are German firms' English possessions being driven to liquidate or put up their shutters, but through the withdrawal of all financial aid formerly obtained through London the branches of world commerce of every description contraband or not, formerly controlled by Germans with the aid of foreign resources, seem likely to slip into other hands. This is notably true of the coffee business in South America, where German concerns are selling out, re-organizing or otherwise altering their status in order to avoid the economic excommunication which England has pronounced against them. Only recently all German firms in Hong Kong have been ordered to liquidate.

WHY IS U. S. EXCEPTED?
Bernstorff Says Government Won't Seize Supplies.
Washington, Jan. 28.—Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, notified the state department that his government had given official assurance that no foodstuffs shipped by the United States to Germany would be seized for military or any other governmental use.
The ambassador's notification to the state department was given verbally, but it was understood that later he would send a formal note on the subject.
Officials surmised that the embassy might have been instructed to "make his communication as an explanation that imports from America would not be affected by the announced purpose of the German government to seize certain food supplies, as reported in news despatches from Berlin. No word had come to-day, however, either to the embassy or the state department, concerning this announcement, and while it was mentioned when the ambassador called at the department, it is understood not to have been made a subject of discussion.
The department called Ambassador Gerard at Berlin for information concerning Germany's intention to appropriate wheat, corn and flour.
PLEASURE OF DEATH.
Those Who Die At Home Don't Know It.
London, Jan. 27.—"The man who dies at home doesn't know the pleasure of death; and I would much rather die here than in the most comfortable bed you could rig up at home."
This is what a dying Irish soldier, in a rough field hospital at Ypres, told Lieut. H. R. Watson, of the Highland Light Infantry.
The soldier came of a long line of fighting stock. His father died on the battlefield of Abu Klea, his father's father at Isandlwane, his paternal grandfather at Alma, and his grandfather's father at Waterloo. An only brother fell in the Boer war, and another now lies wounded in a military hospital.
"I know I am dying," said the soldier, "but I don't mind. It's always our luck, and runs in our family, like wooden legs. There is a joy in fighting that appeals to me, and I wouldn't miss this set-to for all the world."
The man's last words to his officer were "Good-bye, old chap; you were my superior a day or two ago, but at death's door all men are equal."

PAU GOING TO RUSSIA.
Evidence of Close Military Entente Between Allies.
Paris, Jan. 28.—It is stated that General Pau will soon visit the headquarters of the Russian army. The excited subject of the journey is to present the military medal which has been conferred on Grand Duke Nicholas, but it is thought here that the trusting of the mission to an officer of General Pau's standing is significant of the close military entente which exists between the allies. It will certainly tend to impress public opinion in the same favorable way that M. Millerand's visit to England has done.
Trans-Oceanic Phone Predicted.
New York, Jan. 28.—Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the Bell telephone, after talking to San Francisco, uttered this extraordinary prediction:
"The next great feat will be telephonic communication between America and Europe. The thing is possible, and I hope I will live to talk across the Atlantic, as I did Monday from the Pacific to the Atlantic."
"We could telephone from New York to Cape Horn if there will come a day when we can telephone around the world?"
"It is by no means impossible."

Mounted Police Sent to Quell Disturbances.
Moore Jaw, Jan. 28.—According to a story reaching here from a reliable source, certain German and German-Americans from over the line have been making trouble at Rouleau, Wilcox and Avonlea. Boasting of an imminent invasion of Canada and of their own warlike readiness, they have announced that Anglo-Canadian neighbors that peremptory demands have been made on Regina for government action.
It is now understood that already a posse of twenty-five Mounted Police have been dispatched from the barracks at Regina to Rouleau, and that their instructions to the alleged enemies are to the effect that they report in person with their arms at the capital within three days for registration, otherwise stern measures will immediately be headed out.
