Collegiates Practising

The Collegiates are practising for their next game at every opportunity, and the interest being taken in the team by both the public and the THREE OF SENIOR HOCKEY students was shown by the large number who watched the players have a work-out after the skating on Tuesday night on the covered rink. There were fourteen players on the ice. There are several fast mer that Collegiates can call upon if they are required and who are al most as good as the players of the

City Hockey League

The City Hockey League initia games are scheduled for to-night. A double header is billed in which Portsmouth, the champions of last year, will clash with Victorias. The second game will be contested by Iroquois and Bankers, two other senior aggregiations. Three ex O.H.A. players are on the Iroquois line up. These are H. Nicholson, R Boyer and J. Stewart.

O.H.A. Senior Series a Joke Toronto News.

The senior series of the O.H.A. is a joke in some respects," remarkof a prominent officer of the big amateur body the other day. "It nothing more or less than a Toronto institution. Kingston is the only outside team represented in the first division, and 'Jimmy' Sutherland deserves all kinds of credit for sticking to his guns, considering the odds against him. The state of allairs could be easily remedied, however, the O.H.A. would take the bull . the horns and compel some of strong intermediate clubs to senior ranks. Picton, Peterboro, Belleville and Kingston in the east, and Stratford, Berlin, Hamilton and London in the west, could easily support senior teams. If they were in line it would make the series worth

This view is entertained by than one lover of the game. As mat ters stand at present Toronto has a monopoly of the honors in the senior series, and will have until a move is made in the direction suggested. The intermediate series was formed originally for the benefit of the smaller towns, and was intended for players not fast enough for company, and too old for ranks. At one time there were only two senior teams - in Toronto, but with the erection of the Arena every club worth while, and some that were not, took a fling at the "big gates." The result is that now, instead of a dozen senior teams from all parts of the province being in the running for the Robertson Cup, there is only one from the outside. In the intermediate series there are teams plenty fast enough to hold their own with any of the senior organizations.

Balaclava's "Thin Red Line." "The Thin Red Line of England,"

has long lived in song and story, the name being applied generally to British field forces. It is declared by experts, however, that the name properly belongs to the Argyll and Suther land Highlanders, in commemoration of their remarkable repulse of the flower of the Russian cavalry at Balaclava. Volley after volley of rifle fire was poured by the slender line of scarlet coats, into the masses of charging Russian horsemen, until finally the attack was abandoned despite the comparatively slight numerical strength of the British.

"Die Hard, My Men, Die Hard!" The "Die-Hards" are the Fifty-sev enth Foot, the Duke of Cambridge's Own, Middlesex Regiment. At Albuera in 1811 the regiment found itself pressed by a great force. "Die hard, my men, die hard!" was the cry of Col. Inglis to his troops. Backs to a wall, the soldiers did die hard. There were 140 survivors out of 570 who began the fight, the dead including Inglis. At Inkerman, where the regiment was almost wiped out. Capt Stanley raised the cry, "Die-Hards, remember Albuera!" . And the regiment again made good its name.

The Connaught Rangers were originally called the "Devil's Own" because of their rascality, but their superb fighting in the Peninsular war changed the term from one of reproach to one of honor. At Feuntes d'Ororo and at Badajos they fought with amazing fury.
