THE NEW VICEROY.

Lord Wimborne One of the Richest of Great Britain's Peers.

The world, and Ireland in particular, dearly oves a sportsman, and that is one reason why, when Lord Wimborne takes up his residence at the Viceregal Lodge in Dublin, as Viceroy of the Emerald Isle, in succession to the Marquess of Aberdeen, he will be received with the heartiest of welcomes.

It will be recalled how last year Lord Wimborne, who is one of the keenest of sportsmen and soldiershe and his two brothers, Major Guest, M. P. for Pembroke, and Capt. Guest trict, accompanied by an entertaine M. P. for Dorset, served in the South from Toronto, paid a visit to Minder African War, Lord Wimborne winning the Queen's Medal and three clasps - organized the polo team which wrested from the United States the much-coveted International Cup. His lordship's interest in polo, however, is not that of a mere organizer or looker-on; for he is not only a patron of the sport, and always ready with purse and ponies, but he is a player with a passion for the game—a hard, skillful rider, and "a broth of a boy" to beat. There are other reasons, however, why Irish people will extend the most cordial greetings to Lord Wimborne. They will not forget that he is a grandson of Lady Charlotte Guest, Church gave a good interpretation of who, among her services to the study an "Old Time Singing Meeting" in takes up the high office held from 1876 till 1880 by his maternal grand- Herrick recited. Lord Wimborne's mother was the eldest of the six beautiful and gifted daughters of the duke, and very soon her gay costume. The real hit of the after her marriage to Sir Ivor Crost evening was Deacon Pillsbury, who after her marriage to Sir Ivor Guest, in 1868, became recognized as one of the most brilliant political hostesses of the day. In fact, it was the number of distinguished people to be met at Wimborne House, one of the finest mansions in London, which led one prominent statesman to describe the residence as "the centre of the

On more than one occasion Lord Wimberne has confessed that he owes much of the success of his career to "a noble mother," and one of the finest tributes that a wife was ever night at the Hotel Dieu, when Wil- Guns and gunnery have been the paid was this passage in the will of liam Sands, eldest non of Thomas navy's pet subject for nome the late Lord Wimborne: "I thank Sands, 52 Bay street, Bassed away long time past, and it flatters it-God that He has given me a wife so after a brief fliness of pneumonia, self that what it does not know
