crown to change his name to Montagu, and in 1907 was raised to the hereditary honors being conferred upon him in recognition of his very large contributions to the? Liberal party funds.

His younger brother, however, de clined to change his name, and his two sons are Herbert Samuel, of the local Government board, and his brother, Sir Stuart Samuel, present head of the family banking house in Lompard street, and who received a boronetcy four years ago.

In 1913 Sir Stuart was deprived of his seat in the House of Commons as Liberal member for Whitechapel and fined to the tune of some $70, of for having, in spite of his being member of parliment, undertaken business as a banker, and especially as a bullion broker, for the office of the secretary of state for India, at Whitehall, where his cousin, Edwin Montagu, the newly appointed chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, was then under secretary of state.

An English law, enacted in the reign of George III., declares anyone engaged in business with, or taking any contract with a Government department, to be incapable of sitting and voting in the House of Commons. It was shown during the course of the prolonged legal procaedings in court, that the India offithe firm of Samuel Montagu & Co., an immense quantity of silver for the Louis Nethersole, manager for essary for the contemporary stage, on our lines he said. 'Make a half purpose of Indian currency, and had also acted for the department in a number of other transactions, such as, for instance, the brokerage of

It was only because it was shown that the Indian Government had not he firm of Samuel Montagu & Co., had not exacted any heavier remuneration for its services than would have been demanded by other bullion brokers and bankers, that Sir Stuart Samuel, the head of the concern, was allowed to offer himself for re-election by his constituents, after he had paid his fine.

Owing to the scandal in connection with the affair, Edwin Samuel was shortly afterwards transferred from the India office, to the financial secretaryship of the treasury, and now is promoted to cabinet rank.

The chancellorship of the duchy of Lancaster is more or less of a sinecure, although it carries with it a salary of $10,000 a year. It is usually held either by one of the older statesmen who has no longer the strength or inclination to undertake the arduous duties of a secretary of state, but whose support and whose cal authorities, after long observation advice at the council board of the

The chancellor of the duchy takes chancellor of the excheque, and bethe former Sir Rufus Isaac, who is gift of the sovereign, to whom the duchy of Lancaster belongs, independently of Parliament.
