

KIDNEY TROUBLE AFFECTED HIS SPINE

Suffered For Forty Years Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives"

BRONX, N.Y., Oct. 31st, 1913.

"For about forty years, I was troubled with lame back brought on by kidney and bladder trouble. I was never confined to my bed with the trouble, but it affected my spine and I had to rest for a time. I took advertised remedies which never did me any good. Then I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. They did me more good than any other remedy. My son suffered from the same trouble and frequently had to leave off working. But "Fruit-a-tives" remedied it for him. I would strongly advise anyone suffering from kidney and bladder trouble to use "Fruit-a-tives".

DIED ON SAME FARM WHERE HE WAS BORN EIGHTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO.

The Late Daniel Aykroyd, Loughboro, Died Five Rods From Where He First Saw the Light of Day.

Very few men have lived so long in one place as did the late Daniel Aykroyd, Loughboro, who died on March 28th, at the age of eighty-eight years and eight months. He was born on the farm not more than five rods from where he breathed his last breath, and lived there all his life. He was the eldest son of the late Samuel Aykroyd, who was born at Hudson, N.Y., and came with his father to Kingston, New York State about the year 1810, when he was ten years old. His father, who was the grandfather of the subject of this notice, came from Yorkshire, England. He was the descendant of an ancient family of English yeomen, whose ancestry has been traced back to the fourteenth century.

The origin of surnames is an interesting subject, and as Aykroyd is not a common name it might be of interest to some to state its origin. Originally the name was "Oak-rod" or the "place of the oak rods." That was the place where the people of this family lived some five or six hundred years ago. There have been various spellings of the name since that time, but the forms used now are Aykroyd, Akroyd and Aykroyd. Many have thought the name a foreign one, but it is not. A great-grandfather Samuel Aykroyd was living in Kingston at the time the war between Great Britain and the United States, 1812-14, and he had the contract to supply the British soldiers with beef. He was likely a "mild-mannered" man, it is not known whether he got as big a "rake off" as middlemen do to-day or not, but they say he once owned considerable property here, situated in the block bounded by Wellington, Queen, Ontario and Princess streets. One of the buildings in the house still standing at the foot of Princess street, which was occupied by the late Senator Sullivan. This was the home of the grandfather and grandmother of the late deceased, Daniel Aykroyd, and it is an interesting fact that the great-grandson, a century later, is practicing his profession only a block away from the old place.

The founder of the family in this country died at Waterloo, now Cataraqui, in 1832, and the burial services were conducted by the minister of the Anglican church at that time. His son, Samuel Aykroyd, was married at St. George's Cathedral, in 1822, to Nancy Lyon, St. George's, and they settled in the Township of Loughboro, on land belonging to and near the head of Loughboro Lake, a place now well known to many a Kingstonian who angles for the agile salmon trout. They were pioneer settlers in the district and had to hew themselves a home out of the then almost tractless forest.

Two sons and four daughters were the result of this union. Daniel, the late deceased, was the eldest, and Mrs. John Leatherland, the only one of the family now surviving, the youngest.

In 1852 Daniel married Martha Knight, Storrington, who survives him. They raised a family of ten children, only one of whom is deceased, Elta, wife of John Wartman, Glenvale. The surviving members of the family are: Samuel A., dentist, and Overton and Oscar, carpenters and builders, Kingston; William H., M.D., Edgewood, Sask.; Mrs. Moon, Mrs. Poynton and Mrs. Worrell, Toronto; Mrs. Roddenizer, Jacksonville, Florida, and Miss Bella at home with her mother.

The late Daniel Aykroyd was an honest and most independent character. He loved his children and labored hard to provide for them. At seventy-five he was still active on the farm. He could plow at eighty and last fall in his eighty-ninth year, he helped dig potatoes. In his youth he was a considerable one of an athlete, country-wide champion wrestler and jumper, and in paddling a canoe no one on the lake ever matched him.

In religion he was of the Methodist persuasion. In politics he usually voted Liberal, but the last vote he ever cast was for the present member of Frontenac, Dr. Edwards. On March 30th, his remains were placed in the vault at Sydenham

THE LATEST TIDINGS

WHERE QUEEN'S MEN ARE DUCHESSE OF CONNAUGHT'S CANADIAN RED CROSS HOSPITAL.

This Hospital, established through the generosity of Major and Mrs. Astor in the covered tennis court and recreation hall at Cliveden, is completed and ready for patients, and a number of guests assembled to view it on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 18th, by kind invitation of Major and Mrs. Astor. Most of those present had already given proof of their interest in the hospital by promising the loan of their cars when required for the transport of patients to and from Taplow Station, or by undertaking other active work on its behalf. A considerable number of Canadian friends also arrived by train and motor from London, accompanied by various Red Cross and staff officers. The guests were received by Mrs. Astor, and a tour of inspection was made under the kindly guidance of Lieut.-Colonel Gorrell, Colonel C. A. Hodgetts (Canadian Red Cross Commissioners), the matron, Miss Campbell, and the staff of the hospital. The arrangements for the care and well-being of the patients excited the highest praise, everything appearing to be ideal and reflecting the greatest credit upon all who have been concerned in the work of preparation. The entire equipment has been provided by the Canadian Red Cross Society, and a vast array of cases, still to be unpacked, bear witness to the interest taken by the people of Canada in their Red Cross Hospital. Close upon 150 patients can be accommodated, and though primarily intended for Canadian patients, any wounded Britisher will receive a hearty welcome from Colonel Gorrell and his staff, who are one and all of Canadian birth. Mrs. Astor subsequently entertained her guests at tea in one of the three large wards.

The hospital, which contains 150 beds, will be known as the Duchesse of Connaught's Canadian Red Cross Hospital. It is proposed to make Cliveden the main Canadian Base Hospital for the reception of wounded Canadians in England. With this end in view plans have been prepared for the erection, as soon as possible, of another hospital capable of accommodating 500 beds adjoining Taplow Lodge, which is at present being used as a barracks by the medical and nursing staff. Should further accommodation be required there will, we understand, be further developments.

As already stated, the building was generously placed at the disposal of the War Office by Waldorf Astor, who undertook the elaborate structural alterations necessary to make the hospital the most complete improvised institution of its kind in the country. The Canadian Red Cross Society is responsible for the splendid equipment of the hospital and everything is of the most up-to-date and convenient description.

The personnel is being drawn from the Canadian Army Medical Corps and the officers and men of the Canadian Clearing Hospital, who were in residence at Taplow Lodge some time ago, have since gone to the front and have been succeeded at the hospital by a staff from the C.A.M.C., from Salisbury Plain. Lieut.-Colonel Charles F. Gorrell, of Ottawa, is in charge and the present staff of medical officers, who will be responsible for the operating, surgical and medical work, consists of Capt. E. A. Neff and Capt. S. Gordon Chown. The matron is Lieut. (Miss) E. Campbell and the nursing sisters, who also rank as Lieutenants, are Miss L. Smith, Miss G. Blair, Miss P. Welles. The ladies, who present a very smart appearance in their military-looking uniforms, came to England with the hundred nurses who accompanied the first Canadian Expeditionary Force. In addition there is the warrant-officer, Sergt.-Major A. G. Garrauth, and a number of N.C.O.'s and men of the C.A.M.C., but the staff is being augmented daily by medical officers, nurses and orderlies.

A large number of names were appended to the petition.

The Women in Service.

London Mail.

Some twenty women are driving motor-vans in London to-day with perfect success. In one Newcastle shell factory the number of women employed has risen from 60 to 2,500 since the war. At one of the most august of London clubs the fourteen have left in a body for the front and parlourmaids have taken their places. In the north of England, where the need of workers is being most sorely felt, women have even been employed with success as carriage cleaners on the railways. In the East End, through the clever organization of the Women Suffragists, they are building up a British toy industry. In short, the only quarter in which little or no progress has been made in this substitution of one form of labour for another is agriculture, and there the need is greatest of all. Heavy work in the field is quite unsuitable for women. But there is much light work which they might undertake at the call of patriotism—if not primarily as an economic employment, as a public duty.

Mrs. (Dr.) Williams, Brockville, is with her parents, Col. and Mrs. Charles Spooner, Frontenac street.
