

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo
If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.
Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulisified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.
Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess of oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.
You can get mulisified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

REBUKE BY HUNGARIAN OF ATTACK ON BRITAIN

Count Julian Andrassy Makes a Statement.

DID NOT SEEK STRIFE

NEITHER JEALOUSY NOR SELF-INTEREST

Dragged Britain Into the War—The Count Denies That Commercial Motives Influenced John Bull.

Murich, April 8.—(Via London, April 9)—Count Julian Andrassy, a famous Hungarian statesman, has just on the "Origin of the War," in which, while ardently supporting the cause of his country, he brushes aside with contempt the charges now being leveled against England in Germany and Austria-Hungary.
"People," he says, "who know English history cannot accept the thesis of the Oxford professors as to the generous and absolutely disinterested role that England has assumed in this war, but I do not believe, on the other hand, that England knowingly worked for a general war, a belief wrongly diffused in Germany and in Austria-Hungary. During the last Balkan wars, Great Britain never ceased to give moderate advice to her friends of the triple entente. She played in a happy fashion the role of intermediary. She tried to come to an understanding with Germany on all Balkan questions, and, in fact, an agreement was reached on some of them which interested the two powers. I believe that Great Britain did not wish a general European war to result from the Austro-Serbian conflict and that she would have preferred to avoid it, thanks to the concessions which she counted on to make, nor do I believe, as many people pretend to, that jealousy spurred on England to provoke a universal war in order to drown the German competition in blood. Trade evolution need not bring about war between competing countries, otherwise one could not understand why British jealousy had not been provoked by the economic effects of America, efforts which are superior to those of Germany."
Not only does Count Andrassy deny that commercial motives prompted Great Britain to take part in the war, but he takes pains at great length to assert that it self-interest were alone the standard for her conduct. Great Britain would be fighting side by side with Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey, instead of against them.
He confesses himself incapable of understanding the motives, which, as he thinks, are contrary to every interest of Great Britain, and which induced Premier Asquith and Sir Edward Grey to ally with Russia and France. The importance of these views is greater by reason of the unqualified support which Count Andrassy has accorded to the war policy of his old rival, Count Tisza.
"Responsibility for the war," he concludes, "rests on Russia, and on those who encouraged her attitude."

ZEBRA-LIKE UNIFORMS.

Believed Better Than Khaki To Avoid the Enemy.

London, April 9.—The experience of this war may lead to the trial of soldiers' uniforms striped like the zebra, in the opinion of some military observers, who have serious doubts as to the effectiveness of khaki, blue-gray, or any of the other colors now in use. In India and South Africa, where khaki got its reputation as a uniform cloth, it fitted well into the "backgrounds" of the landscapes, but in the different atmosphere and landscapes of Europe both the khaki and the blue-gray show up conspicuously in mass.
Nature, the color experts now say, did not stripe the zebra by way of ornament, but as a protective measure. It is the unbroken mass of color, no matter of what shade, that catches the eye in the distance, Colonel Maude, a well known expert, recounts an instance in India when his party, approaching a parade ground from a distance, were unable to see but one of the three battalions until comparatively close up. The troops all wore scarlet jackets. But two battalions were made invisible by white pipeclay belts and cross straps, which broke the mass of color, while the conspicuous body had dark straps which blended in with the red. Tigers, leopards, birds, lizards, snakes, and most living creatures use a mottled coloring.
While scarlet is most conspicuous at short range, it is the first of the primary colors to fade from view at a distance. As a landscape has all colors in it, striped, large checks or variegated blotches of different colors are the easiest to melt into the background. This fact was recognized in the old times, when forts on the coast were painted in black and white squares.
Even now crude colors in stripes are used to conceal wagons from airmen.

TISSUE OF IMPROBABILITIES

French Press Utter Serious Warning To Bulgaria.
Paris, April 9.—The farcical nature of Bulgaria's reply to Serbia, a tissue of shrieking improbabilities, the Journal des Debats calls it—has caused a marked change in the attitude of the French press, which previously was inclined to consider the incident as devoid of serious significance. The Temps says:
"It is with literal stupefaction we see the Bulgarian apology converted into a complaint of Serbian ill-treatment of Turkish subjects. The document takes its place among the least satisfactory ones of the war, rivaling those of Berlin, with whose chiefs it is difficult not to perceive Bulgarian complicity."
"The frequency of the attacks on the Nish Salonica Railway raises the matter above a mere incident. Let Bulgaria remember that hostility to Serbia means war with France, Great Britain and Russia. The affair may be a plot of the Radoslavof cabinet to prevent rumored changes. If so, it shows how greatly the changes are needed. If the present cabinet is incapable of wisdom, let it resign—or take the consequences."

COLOGNE SCENTS SCANDAL.

Allies' Purchasers Were Grafting In North America.
London, April 9.—The Cologne Gazette prints the following: "The Allies recently found it necessary to replace the commissioners who were in North America looking after the deliveries of arms, because they worked too much for their own pockets. They had demanded such high commissions that, in order not to work at a loss, the armament factories had to deliver bad material. This was openly admitted by the manufacturers."
"It is said that English, French and Russians all shared in the bribes so that they have no grievance against one another. In many cases, commissioners of different countries even co-operated."
"The investigation is still going on, but probably will soon develop into a pretty scandal."
The parish priest of South River, N.J., had eighty-seven of his parishioners arrested for criminal libel. Connecticut rejected the bill to abolish capital punishment.

WAR BULLETINS.

The French War Office stated Thursday night that very important movements are in progress, involving casualties but tremendous results to the Allied cause.

An unsuccessful attempt was made by a native to assassinate the Sultan of Egypt.
Rumors of an invasion of Holland by Germany are without confirmation and discredited by the Netherlands Minister.
A shell exploded in a Canadian billet, killing two and wounding five members of the 13 Battalion.
Forty thousand Albanians under German and Turkish officers are preparing to attack Serbia.
British South African forces are experiencing difficulties owing to poisoned wells at Kubus.
The Japanese cruiser Asama was wrecked on the Lower California coast, and is a total loss.
Turkey has called upon all men capable of bearing arms.

SAW QUEEN OF BELGIANS.

Scotch Soldier Describes Her As Being Weighed Down With Grief.
London, April 9.—"I saw the Queen of the Belgians, to-day," writes a Scotch soldier from the front to relatives in London. "I had gone up to the ruined cathedral with one of my officers for the afternoon service. While we were there the Queen arrived.
"She came unexpectedly. No one, so far as I know, dreamed of her coming. She was dressed with what I can only describe as religious simplicity—a severely plain costume and a tourist cap. Her companions were a Belgian officer and her physician. So far as I could hear no word was spoken.
"Her majesty fascinated me. She was as one who weighed down with grief; her eyes were the eyes of one who has cried long, and could cry no more. She stood looking at the burned and battered walls of the sacred building, awe-inspired, broken, crushed. She acknowledged our salute with a melancholy smile."

EVERYBODY HAPPY.

Extremely Accommodating Action of Two Bridal Couples.
A vicar of a certain English parish was sitting in his study one morning when in burst the verger in a great state of excitement.
"Mr. —" mentioning the curate's name, "wants you at once, sir," he exclaimed. "He has married two couples and married the two men to the wrong women, and he does not know what to do."
"Have they signed the register?" inquired the clergyman.
"No," was the verger's response. "Then they can be married again," said the vicar. "Tell Mr. — I will be at the church in a minute or two to perform the ceremony."
In due course the incumbent made his way to the church and found the parties gathered at the entrance. Before he could say anything one of the bridegrooms approached and said: "We have been talking it over, sir, and we have made up our minds to remain as we are." And they did so.

Tramway Poetry.

By G. A. Hobart.
Der shades of night vare falling fast, As up der city's street dare passed A car vich bore dis strange device: "Der public it doan't ud no ice! Moof up in front!"
Nine t'ousand souls mitin it rode, Anudder t'ousand choined der load; Den mit ten t'ousand souls on board Der vich conductor vildly roared: "Moof up in front!"
"Try not to pass!" an olt man cried; "Get off my feet!" annuder sighed; "Who has removed my breath from me?"
A lady asked, inquiringly, "Moof up in front!"
"My healt', my vealt', my appetite Haf gone!" a man sat mit a fright, Der fat conductor frowned a frown; "You go away back and sit down! Moof up in front!"
"O, pass me, please, a solid strap; Dis vich is loose!" observed a chap, Der fat conductor, yust for fun, Up mit his fist and passed him vun— "Moof up in front!"
Kept Father in Cow Stable.
Gladstone, Man., April 9.—Charges that he neglected his eighty-nine-year-old father and kept him fastened in a cow stable on his farm, have been laid against Henry Dulkey, now at Portage la Prairie awaiting trial. Samuel Dulkey, a German, Henry's father, died, and the circumstances were investigated by a coroner's jury, who brought in a verdict that the old man died in the home of his son Henry, as the result of willful neglect.
