In his address, Mayor Sutherland gave some interesting history in connection with the establishment of the training school of the hospital. He said that prior to 1886, the great need for such a school had been felt. down on her way from Port Colborne At the start off a two-year course had been arranged for the nurses, but this was afterwards changed to three years, and at the present time the course consisted of three years. One hundred and forty-five graduates had been awarded diplomas. Graduates of the school held responsible positions all over Canada and the United States, and this testified to the good work which had been carried on at the training school. The speaker had warm words of praise for Miss Claudia Boskill, superintendent of the nurses, stating that the success of this past year had been due to her devotions. Five graduates were already serving at the front, and twelve more were on their way. "Such devotion and sacrifice speaks well for the Kingston General Hospital," said the Mayor in his concluding remarks, in which he congratulated the graduates, the board of management and the peo-• ple of Kingston and district way The sentiment which attaches + had given their warm support to to Mother's Day is stronger + the work of the hospital.
