HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Joseph Bray, Amherst Island, Saved Boat and Cargo.
A motor boat fatality was narrowly averted on Saturday afternoon when Joseph Bray, Amherst Island, was returning from Kingston to his home with a cargo of freight. Mr. Bray runs a gasoline ferry between these points and has a good-sized launch for the purpose. His launch took a lurch in the trough of the waves and one of the tanks of gasoline shifted backward, causing the cargo to be planked, causing water to pour into the boat. With a yell Mr. Bray worked incessantly, keeping the water at a low depth to prevent his engine from becoming stalled. Reaching shore some quarters of an hour later, he beached his boat and then keeled over in an exhausted condition. However he saved himself, boat and cargo.

Bryan Obligated Him

As he was waiting for a train in a southern United States town a while ago, Secretary Bryan was accosted by a neatly-dressed colored man who asked him if he could spare just a minute.

"What was it you wanted?" asked Bryan.
"As I want," explained the colored man, "is simply for you to shake hands with me and then say 'Good-bye Henry.' It won't take you but a minute, and I just now made a bet with a fren' o' mine standin' over yonners that I knowed you. If he sees us talkin' 'll friendly I wins my bet."

"I don't like to encourage you to make bets," smiled Bryan, "but I guess you do know me now. Good-bye, Henry—and good luck to you."
