KILLED OR TAKEN. Germans Lost Whole Regiment And

Fortifications.

Paris, June 15 .- "When the French troops captured the important position before the farm of Toutvent," writes the official eyewitness on the French battle front "they found nothing remaining of the formidable fortifications installed there, but masses of debris, so deadly had our artillery been." Continuing, the writer says:

"The position was held by the 170th Baden Regiment of 1,000 men, none of whom escaped death or capture. Two other companies of 200 men each, in reserve, also were al most destroyed.

"The assault commenced on June 7th over a front of 1,200 yards, and on June 10th a double line of trenches over a front of 1,800 yards and for a depth of from 200 to 1,000 yards had been captured. At five o'clock on the morning of June 7th, in the face of a heavy fire from the enemy trenches, the assault began under a storm of shot and shell. Not a man of the Breton and Vendeen troops flinched, and the whole line advanced as one individual over the first two lines of the German

"The orders were to entrench there, though the men pleaded to be allowed to go on. What remained of the enemy's troops were found huddled in the wrecked trenches. A few continued to fire, but the rest threw up their hands.

"The fire of our artiflery main-tained a death curtain in the rear, preventing reinforcements coming up, and soon as the position was en-tirely lost the enemy's four-inch and eight-inch guns swept the ground, but our men dug themselves in."

French Children and the British A Winnipeg doctor in the 3rd

Field Ambulance, attached to the Canadian Highland Brigade, says: "One hardly has a chance of talking French, as under the stress of war the part of France has become suddenly English, and the natives love to air any words they can say. Thus you will have some one to say to you after breakfast, 'Good even-ing, thank you, etc.' I hear two or three tiny urchins singing 'Tipper-ary," with a fierce Cockney accent the other day. They evidently hadn't the slightest notion of the meaning of the words, but were vastly pleas- thur Ellis, who has returned from a ed with themselves.
