IN VIEW OF THE RUSSIAN ORDERS JUST ANNOUNCED.

The Shell Orders a Valuable Adjunct to the Regular Business—Connections Made in Many European Centres.

There has been better demand for Canadian Locomotive stock lately, interest having been revived by reports of the Russian orders for fifty locomotives now confirmed. Few people believe that the forthcoming annual report will make much of a showing. In fact, there would be no surprise if the earnings barely covered the preferred dividend, as business conditions during the early part of the year were decidedly poor. Within the past three months, however, there has been an encouraging reversal in the fortunes of the company. The management secured several substantial shell orders and has been successful in the new branch of work, which has proved a valuable adjunct to its regular business.

Both the president, Aemelius Jarvis, and the general manager, A. W. Wheatley, were alive to the possibilities of the foreign locomotive business, and both have recently returned from Petrograd, Paris and London, where they have made valuable connections. These connections should prove important if additional equipment business is to be placed on this side.

Mr. Jarvis, discussing the prospects of Canadian concerns securing orders from Russia, said that it took time and pains. Credentials must be the very best, and the representative must in no way be a middle-man. The Russian Government always demanded reasonable guarantees that tenders were in a position to deliver the goods. Initial orders, however, if properly lined up, would probably be forerunners of much business from Russia.

"Russia feels now," continued Mr. Jarvis, "that Germany's aim has been to keep Russia in an unfavorable light with England and America. The idea that Russia was the big, crude, bear-like and barbarous nation of Europe had been fostered and encouraged in the minds of other countries by Germany."

"In Petrograd, except for the sight of the soldiers marching and drilling, one would not imagine that Russia was seriously involved in the present conflict," said Mr. Jarvis. There was, however, behind this unconcerned demeanor a shortage of equipment for the millions of men who have enlisted to fight against Germany. This was due to the fact that only one single port of entry to Russia was open at the present time for the receipt of war munitions. Outside of Vladivostok, on the Pacific, there was no other accessible point for supplies. Tourists and business men, of course, could get in and out of Russia via Norway and Sweden. Mr. Jarvis sailed to Bergen, Norway, from England in a small 800-ton boat; went from there to Christiania and then to Stockholm, Sweden, from which place he proceeded through Lapland to Petrograd.

The attitude of mind in London towards the millions of men who have enlisted in the short period of six months, according to Mr. Jarvis, Lloyd George, he said, was now regarded even in prominent Unionist quarters as the man of outstanding ability in the present situation. The whole nation was being organized to meet the exigencies of the war in a way which before could hardly have been thought possible.

Under the surface in Britain there smouldered the fires of political feud, and the general impression was that party lines would never be the same again as they were before the outbreak of war. The feeling was growing that home rule for Ireland was now a very remote issue, said Mr. Jarvis. The south of Ireland had not recruited well, while the men of north Ireland had stepped into the breach in large numbers.

"The young men are emigrating to America from the south of Ireland at the present time on every boat that leaves Liverpool," said Mr. Jarvis. "The steerage on the boat I crossed in was fairly swarming with that class. They say over there," he added, "that fear of conscription is driving the young men from the southern counties of Ireland."

Mr. Jarvis bitterly denounced the "swankierism" of certain Canadian representatives stopping at the fashionable hotels of London, and trying to make use of their military uniforms for selfish ends.

The Future Treatment of Invalid Soldiers.

Information has been received in the city regarding the future treatment of invalid soldiers.

It is stated that there will shortly return to Canada many men who, by reason of wounds or sickness, will be no longer fit for active service. In most instances, these men will remain on the military roll, and will be maintained by the Canadian Government until either a pension has been granted, compensation awarded, or until they are pronounced fit to resume their ordinary civil employment.

It is the intention of the Department of Militia to establish a temporary distributing hospital discharge depot at Quebec, while other accommodation will be arranged for by the officer commanding each divisional area.

Upon his return to Canada, an invalid soldier will either be sent into hospital or to a convalescent home, and as regards pay and separation, will be regarded as an active service during the entire time of his convalescence. Meanwhile, his family will be entitled to continue assistance from the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The Y. M. C. A. boys will hold their annual camp on Grenadier Island. A baseball game with a team from Alexandria Bay for the July 5th celebration, to be held July 5th, will be a feature. The Y. M. C. A. motor boat has been overhauled, and is now in good shape. All night camps have been arranged for the intermediates and juniors.

The following boys have passed the swimmer's tests:

Guy Armstrong, Francis McMasters, Jack Clay and John Montgomery have passed the first or beginners' test, and Jack Emery, George Poffley, William Poffley, Arthur Armstrong, Herbert Amer, Russell Northome, Jack Pretty and Arthur Dean have passed the second or swimmers' test. This list does not include the names of the boys who have learned to swim, but who have not tried the tests.

Concert at Camp.

A most pleasing event at Barrielfield camp on Wednesday evening was the concert given by Salisbury's orchestra. Major Pridoux acted as chairman, and the programme included selections by the orchestra, solos by D. Couper, monologues by William McFriedge, songs by E. Edmondson, C. Smith acted as the accompanist.

A Veteran Civil Servant.

George Ross, General Superintendent of post offices for the Dominion of Canada, has been spending a couple of days in the city, and was warmly welcomed by his many friends and acquaintances. He is a veteran in the Civil Service, having served forty-one years. He has just completed a tour of two months' inspection out west.
