Miraculous Escape From Death

Ottawa, June 23 .- Lieut. Reginald Tupper, son of Sir Hibbert Tupper, who was wounded in the great an almost miraculous escape fromdeath, according to a letter received here to-day. Lieut. Tupper was shot first through the thigh the bullet passing through the lower part of his body. Though badly crippled, he German bullet found him. He was shot through both legs, one leg being broken and his heel shot off. In this state he succeeded in crawling a distance of two hundred yards to a trench, where he hoped to be picked up by stretcher-bearers. He remained there some hours before help came and he was removed to the base. Gangrene developed on the journey and the doctors gave him up. Despite his wounds and the blood poison, he has pulled through, and has now been moved to a hospital in England, where his chances of ultimate recovery are said to be good. Captain Merritt, Lieut. Tupper's brother-in-law, who was beside him in the fight, was

BALKAN PROCRASTINATION

Their Intervention May Be Altogether Too Late.

Rome, June 23.—The Balkan deadlock still continues. Most contradictory news comes from every Balkan capital, but as the demands of these little kingdoms overlap, it is a question as to which will cede to the necessities of the situation.

Roumania is the most exaggerated in her pretentions, and Bulgaria the most modest. The intervention of the latter would be the most efficacious against Turkey. However, as it is necessary to make the Balkan states agree among themselves. something which they never have done, politicians here consider their intervention impossible.

Serbia stands firm. As the Quadruple Entente powers have already agreed with her, they can use little pressure. Can Roumania, Bulgaria and Greece remain neutral and lose even what little they have? Every day that passes renders that intervention less essential.

The Colonel of a regiment that was in the battle of Morhange, in the battle of the Marne and at the attack of Eparges, participating in more than a dozen battle and a score of charges, marching each time at the head of his troops and each time running ninety chances out of 100 of being killed, received not a scratch, MOTE ces at Morhange and Eparges. The other day he retired with his staff to an isolated village behind the lines to rest. It was a spot the German heavy artillery had neglected, although it was in range. The chances were that he would pass his days of rest there in security. The evening of his arrival the Germans remembered there was a village there and began to bombard it The last shell they fired fell in the very centre of the messroom. The four officers around him escaped with insignificant bruises but the Colonel was killed outright.

It is estimated, with what justification I am unable at present to say -that at least one-third of the German forces on the western front have been transferred to Galicia The extraordinary difficulty of forcing a way through the German fortified line in the west is fully appreclated here, and recent successe north of Arras are noted with great satisfaction On their part, the Russians are fully determined to carry out their most painful task. In the meantime, the nation is working with redoubled energy to secure victory. It is worth noting that the new measures have already resulted in a considerable increase in the output of munitions, and this is only the beginning of a great national effort with this end in view.
