

ENTIRE LINES BURIED

IN TRENCHES BY FRENCH BOMBARDMENT.

On Gallipoli Peninsula—Allies Gained Over A Mile—United Attacks Resulted in Splendid Victory.

Paris, June 25.—Desperate fighting marks the conflict between the Turks and the Anglo-French troops on Gallipoli peninsula. An official statement issued here yesterday tells of the capture of Turkish trenches filled with dead. Entire lines of the Turkish infantry were buried alive as a result of a bombardment of the French 75 millimeter guns.

The official note gives details of land operations on the north side of the Dardanelles between June 1st and June 8th, and recites that as a result of attacks by the French and the British a gain of from 150 to 500 yards along a front of over a mile was made. British troops took over 500 prisoners.

The text of the communication follows: "Our offensive movement during the last two weeks of the month of May had been gradual, the line moving forward in small sections and making its way from one vantage point to the next point of support.

"But on June 4th the whole line was ordered to attack. The idea was to keep the enemy occupied at all points simultaneously, thus preventing him from bringing up reserves at any one point and at the same time giving our men further opportunity to organize positions already captured by them.

Batteries Silenced. "At about 11 o'clock in the morning the bombardment of the enemy positions was begun. Owing to a long period of dry weather huge clouds of dust were thrown up by the shells and were blown back to our lines by a north wind, a condition which made our firing difficult. The enemy made only an occasional reply to the hail of our '75' guns. Toward noon our aeroplanes reported that all of the enemy's batteries had been silenced.

INVENTIONS WE NEED

Opportunities For Would Be and Could Be Edisons.

The world is full of would be Edisons, and the point we want to bring out is that quite a lot of them are could be Edisons. A man invented the stocking frame from weaving silk stockings. He got the idea while he was watching his wife work. But surely he wasn't the first man who sat and watched his wife work.

There is a huge fortune for the man who can commercialize weeds. The raw material is inexhaustible. For it renews itself automatically every year. It might pay a reader in the paper making trade to follow up this idea.

Then we want a paint that will last as long as the material upon which it is placed and an iron that won't rust. We want something that will counteract the wearing effect of the atmosphere. It's going to be invented some day, and it may as well be done now, and you who read this may as well be the person to do it.

In some remote corner of the earth to-day a could be Edison may be experimenting with the possibilities of cities on the sea. There are millions of square miles of water that are more or less wasted, and sooner or later, as the land area of the earth becomes crowded, people will inevitable take to cities on the sea.

Above all, keep your eyes on Nature, which is constantly making inventions which she never protects with patents.—Stray Stories.

"Let Her Go, Gallagher!" Judge Beaver of Morgan County, Ky., had a trotting mare of which he was very proud. The animal was always driven at the race meets by a man named Gallagher, who was at that time City Marshal of Harrodsburg. On one occasion the judge entered his mare at a trotting meeting in Tipton County. Some sportsmen, knowing of the judge's pride in the animal, thought they would lower his colors for once, so they entered against her a noted fast trotter. At the end of the first mile the two trotters passed under the wire neck and neck at a 2-40 pace, and the judge grew wildly excited. "Let her go, Gallagher!" Let her go, he shouted. And Gallagher, hearing, loosened the lines. The mare stuckly responded and finished more than a dozen lengths ahead amid the wild cheering of the crowd. —Pittsburgh Dispatch.

BUSINESS TALKS To the Readers of the Whig By the Advertising Department

ROYAL BAKING POWDER is a household word, and the newspapers are pleased to believe that it has been made so by its advertising in the dailies. It is a "quality article," and it has had to reckon with unusual competition based upon a big difference in price.

Joseph W. Gannon, of the Royal Baking Powder Company, says: "It is probably true to say that no other advertising medium has such a hold on an individual as his favorite newspaper. The advertiser is sure of a hearing just as often as he demands it, because the reading of a newspaper is a fixed habit of man's daily life.

"Perhaps the best argument I can advance in favor of my conviction that newspaper advertising is most effective is what the company with which I am connected has achieved by many years of consistent use of newspaper space."

Royal Baking Powder is regularly advertised in the Whig.

Recall Queer Custom That Gave City Its Name. Historians relate that Antwerp takes its name from a castle which in Frankish times marked the site of the city. This castle was built to protect the entrance to the Scheldt and to prevent foreign traders introducing goods into the country without paying toll to the sovereign lord. The penalty for theft and smuggling was in those days the cutting off of a hand, and, as in this case the severed members were thrown into the Scheldt, the castle came to be known as Antwerpen—or, in Flemish, Antwerp—"the place of the hand throwing." The castle and two severed hands appear on the city arms to this day.

Antwerp cathedral's tapering spire was once compared by Charles V. to meeklin lace. The towers of the old Steen castle, the fortress palace of the former counts of Antwerp, break the centre of the line of docks and look as stolid and formidable as in the days when the castle was necessary to guard the shipping. Here were held those great fairs which during the middle ages served to attract merchants from all parts of the civilized world.—London Standard.

The Boys of France. How keen the boys of France are to join in the war shown by the letters which they send to the military authorities begging for permission to go to the front. The latest would-be warrior is Andre Pierrot, who has attained the age of eleven. He wrote to General Plagnol, commanding the 21st District, informing him that ever since the war began he has wanted to enlist. Realizing that his age precluded him from offering himself as a volunteer he begged to be accepted as a soldier's boy in the regiment in which his father had served. The lad added that he had a cousin, Lucien Messel, who was a lieutenant, and had been wounded by the Germans. He wanted to avenge his cousin. "My mind is fully made up," he concluded. "Since the beginning of the war I have learned to shoot, and I promise you that my shots will not fail."

The general was requested to send his reply addressed to Andre Pierrot, care of Mme. Pierrot (the boy's grandmother) at Thivet. General Plagnol replied that the boy's letter had greatly touched him. "You are only eleven years of age. You are quite small; nevertheless your heart is in the right place. Continue to assist your grandmother. Your present sentiments are a guarantee that later on you will be a valiant soldier and a good citizen. I press your little hand affectionately."
