Meals on Board. THE KETTLE ALWAYS HOT. Ella Wheeler Wagon. There's many a house of grandeur; With turret, tower and dome, That knows not peace nor comfort, And does not prove a home. I do not ask for splendor, To crown my daily lot; To crown my daily lot, Where the kettle's always hot.

If things are not at all shipshape, I do not fume nor fret; A little clean disorder, Does not my nerves upset. But one thing is essential, Or seems so to my thought, And that's a tidy kitchen. Where the kettle's always hot.

In my Aunt Kattie's household, Though skies outside are drear, Though times are dark and troubled, You'll always find good cheer; And in her quaint old kitchen, The very homeliest scene, The kettle's always singing, While the water's always on.

And if you have a headache, Whatever the hour may be, There's no tedious waiting, To get your cup of tea, I don't know how she does it, Some magic she has caught, For the kitchen's cool in summer, Yet the kettle's always hot.

Oh, there's naught else so dreary In any household found As a cold and sullen kettle That does not make a sound. And I think that have a sound In the hearts in such a spot, Or the kettle would be single, And the water would be hot.

Sleep. Florence Earle Coates in London Athenaeum. To "the child in us that trembles before death."—Plato.

Say, hast thou never been compelled to lie Wakeful in night's impenetrable deep, Counting the laggard moments that so creep Reluctant onward; till, with voiceless cry, Enduring, thou hadst willing been to fly From life itself, and in oblivion steep Thy tortured senses? To such long-for sleep Death is a way; and dost thou fear to die?

Nay, were it this, just this, and naught beside— Merely the calm that we have attained for, The warfarer might still be glad to bide From grief and suffering—but now and more is death—life's servitor and friend—the guide That safely ferries us from shore to shore!

Obeying Orders. Jim was a new porter in the hotel and he was putting in his first night at his new and responsible position. It was 5 in the morning and so far Jim had done all he was told and was getting on splendidly. "Call 17 and 4," commanded the night clerk, as he looked over his call sheet. Jim obeyed. After he had been gone for a considerable time the clerk went up to see if he had called the rooms designated.

"well," sighed the new porter, whom he found on the third floor "I've got 17 of 'em up, but I haven't started on the other four yet."
