Slender persons formed the sub-ject of conversation at a social gathering recently, when David F. Hous-ton, the Secretary of Agriculture, told this about a doctor:

The doctor was very thin. One afternoon a small newsbey entered his office, and on opening the door to the inner room he was confronted by a grinning skeleton. He gave a terrified yell and dashed for the middle of the street, panting for breath.
"That's all right, little boy," soothingly said the doctor, who had hastened to the door on hearing the
