BRITISH PLAN TO MEET

THE COMPETITION OF GERMAN MANUFACTURERS.

Turn to America For Model of Co-operation Between the Scientists and the Manufacturers.

London, July 19. — Methods to bring about a closer co-operation between British scientists and manufacturers in meeting future German competition were discussed at the annual meeting of the Society of Technical Industry, which was founded in Lancashire in 1881. The example of America was held up as a model. Professor G. G. Henderson, President of the society, urged the institution of a plan of industrial fellowships on the lines of that successfully inaugurated by the late Professor Kennedy Duncan in connection with the University of Kansas and an educational institution at Pittsburgh.

The essence of this eminently practical idea is that any manufacturer who desires to have some technical matter investigated applies to the Chemistry Department of the university of technical college for the services of a chemist qualified to prosecute research and undertake to provide adequate remuneration for a period of one or more years. The work is done in the Chemistry Department under the general supervision of the professor, and if necessary facilities for large scale experiments are provided by the manufacturer.

Sir William Ramsay said the Royal Society had reorganized itself for war purposes, and so had the Chemical Society; negotiations were in progress with other institutions, and they were trying to connect their interests and work together for the national cause. The American plan of fellowships he entirely approved, but he pointed out that the viewpoint in England differed from that in America. The idea of the English employer, he said, was to keep his laboratory and works in a system of watertight compartments. A chemist was not trusted with the secrets of the works, nor was an engineer allowed in the laboratory; only the man responsible for the whole of the production knew both sides. Under the American system a young man who showed aptitude was taken on trial for a year, and, if he proved himself worthy, was entirely trusted and learned his work thoroughly.

Sir William declared for the American system. The English system, he said, had done more to kill the development of chemical industry than anything else.

The Ottawa Free Press says: For the first time since the outbreak of the war recruiting sergeants are carrying their activities into the streets. Up to the present all enrolling has been conducted in the various stations, but following up the stirring appeal made Saturday night the sergeants, who may be known by the red, white and blue ribbon on their caps, are on the streets rounding up volunteers. The 38th Battalion alone has eight of the sergeants working on the streets, and the result of their venture will be watched with interest.

Tete de Pont Barracks Notes. When the word was received at Tete de Pont Barracks that the R. C. H. A. was in France, the exclamation was: "Now there is a chance for us to get across."

There will be five bands at the big recruiting meeting at Artillery Park on Wednesday evening.

Word has been received that Q. M. S. Finnie and B. S. M. McDonald, of "A" Battery, R. C. H. A., have been appointed second class warrant officers.

William Bramah, who was, prior to 1908, Serg. Major of "A" Battery, has re-enlisted as an instructor for the Royal School of Artillery. Sergt. Major Bramah is probably one of the best instructors of artillery that could be secured, and the R. S. A. is fortunate in securing his services.
