It Couldn't Help Itself! The density of the German mind well illustrated in the following story told by Mr. Andrew Carnegie. He was once, long before the war, travelling in America with a German financier, and together they went to Niagara Falls. The wonderful scene sent Mr. Carnegie into raptures of praise, but the German merely looked stolidly on and said nothing. Mr. Carnegie was astonished at such indifference, and, hardly able to contain himself, he turned to his companion and said: "Don't you think that's a wonder-
