PAY OF INVALIDS.

They Will\ Receive Their Money

Until They Return to Civil Life. Replyica to an inquiry respecting the pay of invalided soldiers and prisoners of war, Mr. J. W. Borden, Paymaster-General of the Militia Council, states that as regards the former they are paid till they are pronounced fit to return to their civil occupations. are pensioned.

Convalescent homes have been follow. opened in every Province of the Dominion, where in future invalided soldiers will be taken care of free. Their pay, of course, will be issued to them as usual, and also the separation allowance to their depend-

As regards prisoners of war, the British Government is arranging, through the American Ambassador at Berlin, for the issue of one mark a week, the equivalent of one shilling, to all British prisoners of war in Germany, including Canadians. (This sum was erroneously given as one mark a day.) This is not pocket money, but a part of the men's pay; the balance due them is credited to their account and will be paid them at the close of the war or as soon as the men regain their freedom. Dependents of these men are, of course, still receiving the monthly separation allowance, and also any pay which had been assigned them by the men prior to imprisonment. Mr. Borden adds that an official report from the Ambassador has just been received by the British Government respecting treatment by the Germans of British prisoners. According to this, prisoners are well when prisoners are required to work they are paid a trivial amount: Recruiting officers say they continue to receive complaints from no money from the Government or from their husbands since enlistment. It takes about six weeks or two months for Ottawa to complete the necessary inquiries and begin the payment of separation allowances, which, however, date from the day of the husband's enlistment. In some cases it has been found the wife has never communicated with Ottawa, though directed to do so by her husband, and in other cases it is apparent the husband has been misleading his wife as to the pay he receives. The latter trouble is more often met with in the earlier stages of the husband's enlistment, before he has gone

Every wife should know that a private in the Canadian Expeditionary Force receives $1 a day and 10 cents field allowance. Besides this he is clothed, equipped, and fed by the Government. Till he has gone to camp he receives 75 cents daily for his meals. Every married man is opelled to allow his wife half of his day's pay, and should allow her far more, as he has no expenses save for tobacco, if he smokes. In addition the Government pays the wife $20 a month separation allowance from the date of the husband's enlistment. No allowance is made by the Government for children, but their welfare is looked after by the Canadian Patriotic Fund, who will allow 10 cents, 15 cents, or 25 cents a day for each child, according to age, and bring the wife's monthly income up to $45, including her separation allowance and other earnings, but not the money allowed her by her husband from his pay.

Only men who obtain permission to marry from their Commanding Officer at the time of colistment, and marry within 20 days thereafter, are entitled to a separation allowance for their wives.
